Methodist Church Fire Caused Big Smoke Damage

The Scottsville Methodist Church received extensive smoke damage on Saturday night when one of the oil stoves in the main auditorium caught fire. George Omohundro, Jr., superintendent of the Sunday School, discovered the blaze early Sunday morning when he came to the church to check on the stoves. Mr. Omohundro obtained a fire extinguisher from his nearby hardware store and extinguished the fire which was blazing from surplus oil in the heater. No fire damage to the church was done, but soot and smoke caused considerable damage to the auditorium. Repairs and painting had recently been done at the church in preparation for the District Conference which met there on April 14. The two oil circulator stoves were lit on Saturday night to heat the church for the Sunday services. The stoves evidently had been smoking for some time and had burst into a blaze only shortly before Mr. Omohundro arrived at the church. The fire at the Methodist Church marks the second time within recent months that one of the churches in the community has narrowly escaped serious damage from fire. Scottsville Presbyterian Church suffered fire damage this winter, from an oil circulator heater.

A total of 173 heifer calves on every 4 months—in March, July, 40 farms were vaccinated in March through the Fluvanna Farm Bureau's Bang's Vaccination Program, it was announced by Ernest Morris, Chairman of the organization's Service Committee. This is the most calves to be vaccinated at any one time since the program was started. Fork Union District led the county in number of calves vaccinated with 102. Columbia District was second. The farmer with the most calves vaccinated was W. F. O'Brien who had 30. John Slagle and Harry Shepherd helped Mr. Morris on the project, with Dr. John Huckle as veterinarian. Over 400 calves have been vaccinated against Bang's disease since this program was set up by the Fluvanna Farm Bureau last Spring. The vaccinating is done

"Glendower" Open Judge Warns He For Public Visits Will Crack Down During Garden Week On Disorderly Persons

"Glendower", home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Bradley, Jr., will throw open its doors and display its beautiful grounds to the public for the first time this year during Garden Week. This gracious old home is noted for both its history and its beauty. The hand-carved woodwork, done on the place, is unusual, and the interior has remained as untouched as possible through the years since it was built in 1808. Of historical interest, a brick cottage on the grounds is said to be the spot where the county of Albemarle was organized in 1745. The size of the trees and a magnificent hedge of boxwood are only a part of the attractions of the Bradley home. Another home of note in the Scottsville area which will be on display next week is "Redlands", a part of the well-known "King" Carter estate. This is a red brick house set in a grove of ancient trees on Route 20 near Carter's Bridge. The house, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hill Carter of Richmond, was built in 1789 by a grandson of "King" Carter. It is said that there is great similarity between this house and Monticello, probably due to the friendship between Jefferson and Mr. Carter.

The garden, laid out in 1790, retains its original form, part of which is in the pattern of a Maltese cross, and is a combination flower and vegetable garden. Inside the house one may see furnishings which were originally the property of Thomas Jefferson, brought back from France by him and later handed on to the wife of "Redlands". Also open during Garden Week for the third year is "Edgemont", home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Sneed, which may be reached on Route 20, turning right at Keene. This home was designed by Thomas Jefferson for his friend, James Powell Cocke, about 1790. The architecture is pure Palladian. Part of the house is two and one half stories high, while part, which is built on the slope of a hill, goes underground. The former walled-in vegetable garden, excavated at the time of the restoration of the garden, now forms a swimming pool. Many blooming perennials will be seen here, as well as an English box garden and a holly maze.

Garden Week visitors may buy box lunches at "Edgemont" from Monday through Friday, sold by the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church, St. Anne's Parish. Luncheon will be served daily except Sunday in the parish house of Emmanuel Church, Greenwood, and sandwiches and coffee will be served by the women of Grace Church, Cismont, on Route 231.

Judge Warns He Will Crack Down On Disorderly Persons

Judge Sidney Watson gave a warning at Scottsville Trial Justice Court held last Thursday morning, April 16, that if the large number of arrests on disorderly conduct continued in town that he would "have to crack down and crack down hard." "When there are a series of disorderly conduct arrests and it gets too bad, we're going to have to do something about it," Judge Watson told the courtroom after hearing four cases involving 7 people on charges of disorderly conduct. Judge Watson stated that this was a fair warning, and he wanted it known that if necessary to curb disorderly conduct in town, he would give jail sentences. Judge Watson heard 11 cases in the heavy docket presented him last Thursday morning. Eula Jackson and Robert Jackson appeared on charges of disorderly conduct. They were arrested in Scottsville by Sgt. F. F. Marsh after having a fight on the street. Judge Watson dismissed the case, "not because it wasn't disorderly conduct, but because Scottsville doesn't have a domestic relations court." He warned the couple that if they came into court again because of fighting that he would take it into account. Henry Johnson and Norman Haislip were brought up on disorderly conduct charges after being arrested on April 4 in front of Harding's Restaurant in town. Haislip was given a $5 fine, after being warned by Judge Watson to stay away from trouble. The judge told Haislip that it was not apparent that he had pushed the disturbance for cause but that he was backing up Johnson who had started the fight. Johnson was given a $15 fine and a 10 day jail sentence, suspended on good behavior for 12 months. Richard Wells was meted out a $20 fine and Garnett Parrish a $10 fine for disorderly conduct on April 11 in the street by the town water plant. Sgt. Marsh told the Judge that both parties had been drinking some, when they were arrested for fighting. Wells and Parrish gave different versions of how the trouble started. When questioned by Judge Watson, Wells reported that he had been in court before, but Parrish stated that this was his first time.

The case of disorderly conduct brought against Percy Clements was changed to drunkenness after being heard by the judge, and Clements received a $5 fine. James Lucas appeared in court on two arrests of drunkenness and Judge Watson already held two additional warrants on the same charge which Lucas had been unable to pay at last court and was given until April 16 to pay. Judge Watson told Lucas that he had "been going along with him in the past few months, and the last time he was up, Lucas had requested a jail sentence if he came up again." On the March 24 arrest Lucas was given a $20 fine and on the March 28 arrest he received a $25 fine and a 30 day jail sentence, suspended on good behavior for 3 months. Lucas was unable to pay any of the 4 fines, and was committed to jail for failure to pay. In other cases appearing: Winston Drumheller was given a $25 fine for speeding and operating a car with no driver's permit. William Bell received a $10 fine for operating a truck with the stop lights and signal lights not working. Richard Birkhead was meted out a $5 fine on charges of drunkenness.

North Carolina suffered the greatest number of casualties in the Civil War.

Winner of the Farm Photo Quiz in last week's issue of the Sun was Mrs. Charlie L. Patterson of Esmont. The Patterson farm contains 36 acres and is 3 or 4 miles from Esmont and 6 miles from Scottsville.

Mrs. Patterson is the mother of 12 children, and at the present time has 6 children attending Scottsville High School. Mr. Patterson's death occurred this winter. Three of the Patterson children are married and three are working away from home, and of the 9 girls and 3 boys, 6 are now living at home with their mother. One of the Patterson girls called at the Sun office this week to receive the 14 $1 gift certificates and aerial photograph of their farm. She reported that a neighbor recognized their home in the paper and called them on Saturday to say that they were the winners. The Pattersons have a garden and raise their own vegetables, have 5 cows, some chickens, hogs and a horse.

Moon Stars Again

Billy Moon, star pitcher on the Scottsville High School ball team this year, pitched a one-hit ball game against Crozet last Thursday on their home diamond making the lop-sided score of 8-10. Billy pitched a terrific game.

Batteries for the game were Moon and Robert Taylor. Taylor played outstanding ball at catching as well as hitting having connected with a grand slam home run in the sixth inning, thereby bringing the total score to 8-0.

Local Residents Attend Hearing For Robinson

The south side of Albemarle County and Scottsville was well represented at the hearing given Dan A. Robinson in Charlottesville last Wednesday night, April 15. A bus load of citizens of the Scottsville area attended the meeting in a body, and a good number of interested persons drove their cars to the meeting held at the county courthouse.

Robinson requested the hearing after being asked to resign by the Albemarle Board of Supervisors. Scottsville District member of the Board, Ashby Harris, is one of the two supervisors on the board, who has stood by Robinson.

Among the 50 persons from this area attending the meeting were Mrs. W. P. Beal, W. P. Beal, and W. H. Brown, who were among the speakers at the hearing who spoke in favor of Robinson. Mrs. Beal, town treasurer of Scottsville, told the large audience at the courthouse that Robinson had kept errors at a minimum and service at a maximum and had collections of almost 100 percent on taxes. She reported that as treasurer of Scottsville she was in a position to know that tax collectors can be unpopular. She stated that tax collectors did their duty and someone else sets policy.

The supervisors refused to rescind their stand in asking for Robinson's resignation which has passed the Board by a 4-2 count. The resignation is requested to take place by June 30.

Mrs. Carden Program Leader For Meeting

As a large part of the food for the approximately 200 or 250 lunches served was donated, the Society was able to clear this amount Mrs. Bruce reported. Members of the Society voted to place the funds raised into a fund to be used for parsonage improvements.

Rev. Jack Taylor, pastor, was present at the Thursday night meeting and told of the plans for the week of services and visitations in the Methodist United Evangelistic Mission which is being held this week at the Scottsville Methodist Church. #### The Methodist Mission

As this is being written, Methodist churches in this area and others all over the southwest are in the midst of the Methodist United Evangelistic Mission. It is an all-out program to win more persons to Christ.

Ministers and leaders of the churches have worked for weeks planning the services. Such a program, designed to promote the spreading of the word of God, is sure to be a success.

Council Needs Your Vote

Only one candidate for mayor and six aspirants for a like number of seats on the Scottsville Town Council filed in time for the June 6 councilmanic election, according to a story printed in last week's issue of The Sun.

One who cursorily glanced at the headline "Mayor, Council Candidates File; No Opposition" probably took the attitude that because there are no contests, he won't need to vote. But a deeper study of the situation would change that view.

The Mayor and members of the council of Scottsville — like hundreds of other small towns — receive no compensation whatsoever for their services. They are public-spirited residents who want to work for the betterment of their community. And there are headaches aplenty with a deep responsibility of making the right moves in conducting the affairs of the town. For instance, the council is currently faced with the problem of extending the town limits to take in many residences which long should have been a part of the town. But, to do so, the council must provide water and sewage facilities. Such facilities would cost several hundred thousand dollars. Problem: will the additional revenue from taxation pay for enlarging the water and sewage system or would it be wiser to construct a completely new system?

Yes, the candidates for mayor and the council need your vote on June 6 despite the fact that there is no opposition. They need your vote of confidence that they will continue to do their best for the people of Scottsville.

Ramblings

It was a strange sensation the other night to drive home in the dark with snow flakes swimming toward the windshield while the headlights picked out the pale green plumes on the trees that usually form a stark black background when the snow flies. The tulips that were open and smiling at the sun in the morning had closed into pointed buds against the cold, and the whole thing seemed an affront against nature.

"The worst bankrupt in the world is the man who has lost his enthusiasm." This could be an item of controversy. Some people seem to pride themselves on the fact that they have lived long enough or fully enough not to get enthusiastic about anything. This seems to be the result of a fear of being fooled or disillusioned. Enthusiasm is a charming virtue, and something that can be kept or lost at will, but can't be taken away without the owner's consent.

Another form of bankruptcy falls upon those in the writing trade from time to time—there's a sheet of paper in the typewriter and it is time to deliver said sheet covered with an intelligible message, springing full-bodied from the writer's brain. But suppose it doesn't spring? Then the writer has to put down what somebody else has said first. Which is just what this writer is going to do now.

Stolen from the classified section of a western weekly newspaper: "WANTED: Man to handle dynamite. Must be prepared to travel unexpectedly."

Here is a nice recipe for a healthy old age, passed on by an old Negro woman. She was asked how she kept in such vigorous health and spirits despite her near 100 years. When she worked, she said, she worked hard. When she sat, she sat loose. When she worried, she went to sleep. This is very much the philosophy of another hundred-year-old we knew who says "I never hurry, I never worry."

This is the time of year when notices by firms and colleges are being made of those who will be placed on the retirement list this year. From varied sources, word has come of the extreme differences of reaction to the news by those who have reached the age when their life work is done. One teacher put it that she is "going out of retirement," meaning that now she can do some of the things she has never been free to do before. Another refuses to face the issue, feeling that a cold door is inexorably closing, shutting her out of active life and forcing into a life without the security of schedules and routine.

Many fine contributions have been made by supposedly "retired" people who find hobbies which become remunerative or beneficial, and much artistic and creative work is done by those who are in the autumn season of life.

HOW SUBMERGED LANDS BILL AFFECTS VIRGINIA

During the Senate's debate on Submerged Lands Bill I have been somewhat disturbed by indications of a widespread misunderstanding of the issues involved. Many of the letters I received from obviously sincere and intelligent Virginia constituents suggested that they believed: (1) that the pending proposal would rob most of the states, including Virginia, for the special benefit of a few favored states with oil resources off their coastline; (2) that passage of this bill would deprive the public schools of large amounts of money which otherwise would be available for educating our children, and (3) that the Congress was proposing to do some damage to our judicial system by overturning decisions of the Supreme Court.

The facts, actually, are these: S. J. Res. 13, as the bill before the Senate is known, merely provides that the States shall have clear title to ownership of lands beneath navigable waters within their boundaries and of the resources on or in those lands and that the federal government gives up any claim to such property. No provision is made with respect to resources of the continental shelf, which lies beyond the historical three mile boundaries of the coastal states and the bill would have no effect on the Constitutional powers of the federal government to regulate commerce, provide for the common defense or to conduct international affairs in the navigable waters within state boundaries.

It is only in recent years that the federal government has claimed these off-shore property rights but the states had enjoyed them for many years and developed a great wealth in seafood industries, sand and mineral extraction, filling-in to make new lands and building structures such as piers over the waters. Virginia, of course, has been a participant in this program and would have much to lose if the federal claims were sustained. That the pending bill is not something of selfish interest to only a few states is indicated by the fact that since 1938 officials of 47 states have appeared in support of similar legislation and more than 3,200 chambers of commerce, trade associations and similar groups have advocated it. As for legal aspects, the Supreme Court said in 1845 that "the shores of navigable waters, and the soils under them were not granted by the Constitution to the United States, but were reserved to the states respectively," and "the new states have the same right, sovereignty and jurisdiction over this subject as the original states." That rule has been applied and affirmed in 52 Supreme Court decisions and in 244 state and federal court decisions. There are only three recent cases which have raised a doubt and made Congressional action necessary for clarification.

not be justified in robbing them simply to make worthwhile use of the revenue. And, even if the oil resources under our coastal waters belonged to the federal government I would oppose using that source of revenue for operating expenses of our schools because, as I indicated in this column recently, compromising strings would be attached to the funds. Even though federal aid to education were a proper and desirable government function such aid geared to receipts from off-shore oil would be wholly unsatisfactory. The amount of such revenue would be governed by the price of oil
