Brown Wins Suggestion Award

For making the three best suggestions for improvements at the United States Rubber Company Plant here in Scottsville, Walter E. Brown, machinist from Schuyler, was awarded $25 by Master Mechanic B. L. Philpot of Scottsville this past Monday July 14.

Brown, who has been with the plant since June 20, 1945, has made suggestions in past years but this marks the first time that he has been the winner of the Annual Suggestion Award which covers from July to July each year. Brown had already received $40.55 plus a letter of merit for his three suggestions.

Following are the three suggestions which marked Brown as a winner:

1—"That a small twist cable be used on the ply hoist, the same as in the weave room. The life of the Weave Room cable is much longer under the same load." This netted Brown $25.58.

2—"That a switch be put in each line from boiler to pump so that the pump will not start when boiler is down. This could save a lot of trouble". An award of $15 was given for this suggestion.

3—"That pull down roller guides on looms be turned over so that the worn part will be at the bottom. This will work the same as a new part and make the pins in roller last much longer." This suggestion brought Brown a letter of merit.

A suggestion box with blanks is kept on hand at the plant so that all employees might submit suggestions when they feel they have a worthwhile idea. A plant spokesman estimated 75 to 80 suggestions are received every year. The winner of the annual award is the employee who submits the best three or more suggestions.

R. C. Watts Joins Extension Staff

R. C. Watts, a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, joins the Extension staff in Fluvanna and Goochland Counties.

Mr. Watts was born and worked on a farm in Mecklenburg County. He was graduated from V.P.I. in the Agronomy Department in June 1952. Mr. Watts did an outstanding job in his department. He was a member of the Agronomy Club for four years holding the office of president his senior year. He was also a member of the Agricultural Club whose membership is made up of representatives of all agricultural departments in the college.

Mr. Watts had the honor of being a member of the Agricultural Student Life Council during his senior year. This Council is made up of a representative of each of the agricultural departments within the college of agriculture

Mr. Watts was also a member for two years of the Business Staff of the Student Radio Station which is located on the V.P.I. Campus.

He will work closely with P. H. France, County Agent of Fluvanna County, and Mr. Truett, County Agent of Goochland County, in carrying the findings of the Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station and other information to farmers and others in these two counties. He will spend a large portion of his time with the 4-H club program which is the foundation of every sound Agricultural Extension program.

Mayor Makes Plea For Cleanup Campaign

Declaring that Scottsville is the dirtiest that he has seen it in his 19 years of civic service Town Mayor Dr. Percy Harris has submitted a plea to the inhabitants for a self-imposed cleanup spree.

This cleaning the town problem was the main item on the agenda for the Town Council when it met last Thursday evening.

"People should take more pride in their town," Dr. Harris stated. If each one would cut the tall grass and pick up the cans and garbage on his own property the looks of the community would improve tremendously.

Pointing out the sanitation hazard created by garbage being strewn over the area, Dr. Harris requests the townspeople to make sure that their garbage cans are covered properly and that all disposal is placed inside so that the collectors can more efficiently help in keeping Scottsville a cleaner community.

Simpson Superb

Out at the U. S. Rubber Company Plant here in Scottsville these days the main topic when the conversation turns to baseball is 17 year old Melvin Simpson, the Plant Ball Club's strikeout artist.

Melvin has been mowing down the opposition week after week with little regard for batting averages or the reputations of men much more seasoned than himself.

Up to last Sunday Melvin had struck out 44 in four games; allowed only nine earned runs for a neat 2.25 average; walked only 11; and given up a total of only 23 hits. During this tour he had a 2-2 record for a ball club whose season's record read 2-5.

Sunday the youthful flinger became a winning pitcher for a losing team. Notching his third win of the year Simpson struck out 12 walked only two, gave up seven hits, and only two runs as The Plant downed Red Hill 5-2 in a seven inning contest.

The Rubber Plant won officially 9-0 as Red Hill failed to field nine men and had to borrow several from other clubs.

The locals tallied all their runs in the fifth frame on only two hits as three Red Hill pitchers attempted to stem the tide. In all the Plant only garnered three hits off of losing pitcher Shifflett.

Jim Childress singled in the first for his only hit of the day dropping his team leading average to an even .500.

Byrd Is Given Big Majority By Local Voters

Senator Harry F. Byrd was chosen by the Scottsville voters by a margin of nearly six to one over Col. Francis Pickens Miller in Tuesday's Democratic Primary as 210 cast their ballots for the Senator while only 37 votes went to Miller.

This total of 247 votes was considered better than 40 percent higher than had been expected according to Rev. J. F. Daniel, one of the voting judges for the Scottsville precinct. There are only approximately 300 registered voters in this area.

In Fluvanna County it was four to one for Byrd as he got 689 votes to only 167 for the "anti-machine" candidate.

Protest Contest Ruling Is Given

The protested baseball game between Scottsville and the U. S. Rubber Company, which played July 5, has been decided in favor of the Rubber Company in a letter from John W. Williams, commissioner of the Tri-County Baseball League.

In the third inning of the game, with the Plant ahead 2-0, Scottsville at bat, one out and men on second and third, the home team started a double steal and Melvin Simpson, young Plant hurler, balked on a pitch. The umpire permitted Woodrow Hughes, Scottsville Manager and right fielder, who had been on second, to come on in with the tying run.

Plant Manager Billy Goodman protested the decision and announced that he was playing the game from that point under protest. Scottsville won the game 6 to 4.

Now the contest will have to be started over again in the bottom of the third with one out, a man on third, and the score 2-1 in favor of the Plant.

Commissioner Williams letter follows:

"With reference... regarding a game between the U. S. Rubber Co. and Scottsville Baseball Clubs, played Sunday July 5th and which was protested by the U. S. Rubber Co. Baseball Club.

"The rule is so clear on this particular play in question that I do not feel that it is necessary to call a meeting of the Board. My decision on the matter is this:

The runner on 3rd base should be allowed to score and the runner on 2nd base should be allowed to advance to 3rd base. The runner on 2nd base should not be allowed to score. When a balk is called each base runner will advance one base only, regardless of whether a double steal was on or not, as a matter of fact if the pitcher had then turned and thrown the ball to center field, the runner on 2nd base would not have been allowed to score. The play originated with the pitcher and when the balk was called the ball was dead. The umpire might have been slow in calling the play. At any rate it was a part of the same play.

"This game will have to be played over starting at the inning in which this occurred with the base runner on 3rd the same number of outs and if possible the number of balls and strikes on the batter.

"Please attempt to arrange a date that will suit both teams and if possible on a Saturday afternoon.

Court News

"Someone sells fighting liquor over in Scottsville," Judge P. W. Seay asserted yesterday in Fluvanna's Trial Justice court at Palmyra.

The Judge was hearing the case of Theodore Vest, Negro of North Garden, who was being tried on charges of "assault... with attempt to maim, disfigure..." etc.

Vest was accused of knifing Walter Jones, Negro, on July 11, in an argument over whose home the 12 year old daughter of Vest's wife would stay in. Jones contended that the girl had been brought up by him and his sister and desired to remain in his custody.

Vest, stated the witnesses, tried to force the girl to return with him to North Garden. The girl resisted and a fight ensued.

Testimony stated that Bennie Gaynes, a resident in the Jones household, struck Vest when he tried to take the girl. Then, the testimony continued, Vest struck Gaynes with an axe handle before Gaynes threw him to the floor.

Then the fight carried outdoors where Vest contended that Jones struck him several times with the axe handle before Vest grabbed the handle again and knocked Jones to his knees with a blow on the head.

Jones and his sister Sally Jones both testified that Vest then drew a knife and cut Jones three times while Jones was attempting to regain his footing.

Jones then ran to a nearby truck and had the driver take him to Scottsville for treatment. As they were leaving the Jones house, Vest then followed the truck to Scottsville in a taxi.

Unable to arouse a doctor at that early hour, Jones ran into town where he located Police Chief F. F. Marsh and had Vest arrested.

Vest, when on the stand, insisted that he hadn't knifed Jones and that he was involved in the fight only after the others had started it by manhandling him.

Judge Seay informed the defendant that he did not believe his story and held him responsible for the brawl. In view of the fact that both Vest's wife and father are dependent upon him, the Judge fined Vest $20 and costs and gave him a six months suspended sentence on two years good behavior.

As Vest is already on 30 days suspended sentence from a Scottsville Trial Justice verdict of about three months ago it was stated by the court that it was expected that that sentence would have to be served.

County Farm Notes

By P. H. France

At least one cause of the mysterious disease of cattle has been found.

The Sinclair Refining Company, Sinclair Research Laboratories, Inc., and the VPI Agricultural Experiment Station have announced jointly that a highly chlorinated naphthalene will produce a bovine hyperkeratosis, or X disease. The discovery follows a year of intensive work by Dr. Wilson B. Belt veterinarian at VPI.

The malady appeared in this country about 10 years ago and scientists have been looking for the cause or causes ever since. Although not too widespread, X disease has caused considerable concern to livestock producers. Affected animals lost their appetite, their eyes water, they slobber constantly, their skin becomes rough and hard, and the animals nearly always die.

Materials that have been used to produce the disease experimentally include a certain kind of processed alfalfa, feed concentrate, a wood preservative, and a lubricant. It is possible, says Dr. Belt, that a highly chlorinated naphthalene in some way has gained entrance into the feed materials or is present in the wood preservative. It is also possible, he believes, that other chemicals may be found that will cause the disease.

A complete report of Dr. Belt's work is being published in the July issue of the Virginia Journal of Science.

Start spraying tomatoes to control late blight—particularly if cool, damp weather continues.

The disease may appear at any time.

Insoluble copper is the recommended control material. It is available from most farm supply stores. Directions for mixing usually are found on the container. Another chemical, zineb, also is effective in the control of tomato late blight.

Spray thoroughly, covering every leaf and fruit on both top and bottom sides. Repeat applications about once a week, and after rains.

Safeguard against extended drought periods which may severely damage pastures this summer.

G. R. Epperson, associate agronomist at VPI, says many pastures last year were drought stricken and provided little grazing in mid-summer and fall.

Here are his suggestions:

Seed sweet sudan grass and soybeans immediately to provide temporary pasture for late summer and early fall. The mixture also can be used to replace pastures that are being re-seeded at that time. If the grass and soybeans are not needed for pasture they can be used for silage or hay.

Apply 30 to 60 pounds of additional nitrogen in July or August to pastures which are predominantly or wholly grass. The additional nitrogen will give greater benefits on taller-growing grasses such as orchard grass and fescue.

Make early seedlings of small grains, rye grass, or crimson clover, or combinations of any of these. These seedlings should be made in August or early September (30 to 60 days before the average date of the first killing frost), if maximum grazing benefits are to be expected. Seedlings of this kind, if fertilized liberally, should provide four to eight weeks' grazing for five or six cows per acre.

If you are interested in further details, I shall be glad to assist you.

Extension Director L. B. Dietrick will speak at the Orange Experiment Station Field Meeting on Tuesday, August 19th, which will begin at 1:30 p.m.

The tests at the Station deal with varieties, fertilization, rotations, weed control, and other phases of crop production. I trust that we may have a good delegation from our county as many of the experiments are conducted on the same types of soil found in Fluvanna County.

Ramblings

It's funny how easy it is to remember what you've forgotten to take on a trip, even if it is to be only a short one to town, as soon as the motor on the car begins to purr and you're at least a mile from the house. Good advice comes from one father who says to his family after everything and everybody is packed into the car, "Now I'm going to drive around the block—and during that time I want everyone to remember what he has forgotten!"

All the excitement over the radio and on television connected with the Republican convention has come and gone, and Chicago must seem blissfully quiet. So do all the local business establishments that imported radios for the occasion. How fast events come and go, once the outcome is known. I often wonder what it would be like to be around 100 years old and know that whatever happens, it will pass out of mind, and resolve itself. By then, fads and fashion, political races and financial ups and downs, would not seem to be so very important. Surely after a (Continued on page five)

Summer is the hot season of the year and work in the kitchen often becomes a dread. The Hotpoint Institute has given us an excellent suggestion in combating unnecessary heat in preparing delicious meals.

The suggestion is by using the broiler more often because broiling is fast, clean, reliable, easy, and the foods you broil may be as extensive or as inexpensive as you please. Also, the broiler pan is light weight and easy to clean. (A method of cleaning broiling pans will be given below.)

It is not necessary to preheat the broiler; it just wastes heat. And remember the oven door is left open when broiling.

A general rule for placing the food is 4 inches from the unit. However, if a person is very meticulous, many ranges have broiler measures that tell the exact position for foods when broiling.

When turning food to broil it on the second side, see that it covers the same area that it did in the first place (so that a solid area won't be exposed to the heat and the juices cook onto the pan.) Season the food after browning since salt retards browning.

To wash the broiler pan, sprinkle the rack with soap or detergent and cover with a damp dish cloth as soon as you empty and drain the hot pan. As soon as dinner is done, the broiler pan will wash clean in a jiffy.

To save time and energy—after the meat is broiled and removed from the rack, why not just make the sauce, better known as gravy, right in the broiler pan? To the drippings in the pan, add a can of cream of mushroom soup. Dilute with about 3/4 of a can of water and blend on the giant surface unit until bubbling hot and smooth as velvet. This is one way of adding flavor to gravy but there are many other ways such as substituting tomato juice for the water.

Broiler meals are attractive and delicious. Following is a tasty broiler meal:

BROILER MENU

First, start off by making a cheese sauce in the bottom of the broiler pan. When the sauce is made, on goes the broiler rack, decked with foods to be sauced. Make ham rollettes (slices of boiled ham rolled around bundles of cooked asparagus stalks or whole green beans or a mushroom stuffing and held firmly with toothpicks) and surround with sweet potato croquettes (mashed sweet potato encasing a marshmallow, and rolled in crushed cornflake crumbs). Tuck pineapple slices or tomato halves in the corners for an extra added attraction.

The sauce keeps piping hot while the rest of the meal broils to a sizzling goodness.

Broiler meals are limited only by imagination. You might like Kabobs, or corned beef hash patties (for a new touch, try mixing a can of whole kernel corn and a beaten egg into the hash—a stretch and delicious, too) ham or seafood croquettes, open-face sandwiches. The imagination can make your broiler meals delicious.

Broiler meals are wonderful in warm weather because they are such shorttime cooking meals that they mean a minimum of time at range.

Twelve members were present.

Better—But Still Bad

The new price control law is better than its predecessor for the reason that it modifies and eliminates some of the powers of the controllers. But it is still a bad law—for the reason that anything which permits political dictation of the economy, and political tinkering with the natural law of supply and demand, is bad.

Shortly before the new law was passed, the House did the right thing by voting for a measure which would have lifted virtually all controls on consumer goods. However, strong pressures were brought to bear and the compromise bill was accepted.

It will be a sad day for this country if we ever forget that controls deal only with the symptoms of the economic disease called inflation, not with the disease itself. Controls are based on the theory that all we have to do is to tell the merchant and manufacturer and others concerned that this article or that must be sold for such-and-such a price. They conveniently overlook the fact that the true causes of inflation are found in such menaces as unbalanced budgets, an ever-growing Federal debt, and wanton waste and fiscal irresponsibility in every branch of government.

It's one thing to tell merchant and manufacturer what can be charged for goods. It's a very different thing to make people buy and sell the goods if the politically-established price is too low to pay the costs and leave some kind of profit. And that is why, in nation after nation; controls have bred scarcity and reduced living standards.

Congress should have abandoned the controls entirely. And everyone who believes in a free, dynamic economy should keep on working toward that end.

Country Lawyer

By Walter Johnson
 General of the Army, Dwight Eisenhower, is now the Republican nominee for President of the United States. This is the first time in one hundred years that a professional soldier has been nominated for President. In 1892 the Whig party nominated Gen. Winfield Scott who had led our army in Mexico and who was the military hero of that day. The Whigs lost that election with such emphasis that the party was also lost and as a result the Republican Party was created.

The Republican National Convention resolved into a contest between two ideologies. The core of the Taft support was conservatism while the core of the Ike support was liberalism. The latter won out. Largely the same kind of thinking that took over the Democrat party years ago has now taken over the Republican party.

At this moment it appears that the contest this year will be between two "liberal" parties and with the conservatives of both parties sitting out in the cold with no house and with no means of expression. That is the situation at the moment but it may change. It all depends upon Ike.

In his acceptance speech Ike told the convention, and the nation at large by radio, that he was embarking on a Freedom Crusade. This can mean most anything and it must be clarified and we can expect that it will be.

The liberal or leftist concept of Freedom for the people is that the citizen shall be relieved of the burden of managing his own affairs and this burden shall be taken over by government. Whether Ike meant this type of Freedom or whether he meant the kind of Freedom contemplated by the Founding Fathers will be clarified before too long.

Should it turn out that Ike is as "liberal" in his thinking as are the principals of the movement that caused his nomination then we are faced with the situation of both major parties pushing leftward and with no instrumentality existing through and by which the conservative voice may be heard.

Certain it is that conservative Republicans now look upon their party with much concern. That they should pump their individual strength and substance into the party to keep it going through the years and then lose the party to the liberals is not a pleasing outlook.

This Ike must and probably will recognize. He cannot hope to win the election without the enthusiastic support of the conservatives among our people. Back in his own mind Ike certainly has ideas of his own and these must and will come out. When his own thinking reaches the surface we will know and be able to chart a course.

If it develops that Ike is "liberal" then it means that both parties are liberal because certainly the Democrats are so steeped in that sort of thing that conservative Democrats cannot hope to recapture their party this year. The real differences among the people is right versus left and it is upon that issue that the parties should go before the people.

The ideal condition would be for a new party to develop which would house the conservatives and would stand as opposition to the liberals. The old line up between the Republicans and Democrats is outmoded now with the right-versus-left problem standing as it does. Now both major parties have both liberals and conservatives. There is no way of telling which group is in the majority as among the people.

Ike will be closely watched during the next few days and weeks. His conduct will determine whether or not he will get the support of the conservatives. To win he must, of course, have the enthusiastic support of the conservatives. It will be most interesting to watch developments during the immediate future.

century of living you would not worry too much over the present state of affairs and if hat brims, hemlines and stocks went up, you'd know that eventually they'd come down again. To older people, time seems to telescope and the years begin to spin so fast that recent ones are mere yesterdays. Children are born, grow up, marry and more children are born, grow up and marry, yet to each of those children, their lives seem long and full while they are just another leaf on the family tree to great-grandma. I talked to a grandma only in her eighties recently, who said that she heartily disagrees with those who tell her to stop looking back, but to live in the present. She says she believes in thinking about the most pleasant things, and all of them are in her past, when life was more gracious and not so hectic. On the other hand, my own grandmother, who is pushing the 100 mark, listens with interest to political contests, enjoys quiz programs, hears certain regular news problems and sermons on the radio, and has her favorite columns in the newspapers. While she notes the thermometer every day, weather is of little consequence to her, and she takes each day as it comes. Her observations about children, wives, husbands, and the doings of her friends and family make one believe that it would not be so bad to live that long, if it gave one a peaceful sense of security that things will go on, up and down, good and bad, in very much the same way no matter how we live or try to change them.

The marriage of Miss Thelma Mowbray, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Mowbray, of Scottsville to Sgt. John Gunner, took place Tuesday, July 8.
Sgt. Gunner served 33 months overseas. Miss Mowbray finished school at Highland Springs, Richmond, with the class of '51.
After a wedding trip to North Carolina, the couple will make their home at Blackstone.
Diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, rubies and opals are the five recognized precious stones.

MASSEY-HARRIS 35 PLOW WITH 3 POINT HITCH

Snap on the left-hand draw The right-hand draw strap . . . and the adjustable upper link strap . . .

Attaching the 35 Plow to the 3-point hitch of the 22 tractor is that simple. And 3-point attachment gives you better control, too. You lift and lower the plow hydraulically with a touch of the Depth-o-matic lever. A crank on the right-hand draw strap adjusts plow level to assure uniform and accurate furrows. The plow itself is precision built of heavy stock to take the strain of continuous plowing in heavy soils.

Come in and take a look at the 35 —the quick-attaching, easily-controlled mounted plow that's built for year after year of rugged duty.

The Meanderer

raspberry bushes laden with luscious fruit, and some dewberries were ripe. We saw Juncos, the little snowbirds that are so common around us all winter. These were a different subspecies, however than ones we have. Our winter visitors are the Boreal Slate-colored Juncos—the ones we found in the mountains being the Carolina Junco. These seemed larger, more gray, and had a pale gray rather than the flesh-colored bill of our winter friends. There were many Towhees. The Blue-headed Vireo we heard several times, quite distinguishable from the Red-eyed, which nests with us. We caught a fleeting glimpse of a Chestnut-sided Warbler feeding young, saw a female Black-throated Blue Warbler, a Black and White Warbler and heard Field Sparrows and Cardinals. We saw no hawks, nor did a Raven, which we hoped we might see, come into the picture.

Where Counts
Where wear and weather hit hardest — on the exposed part of your shingling — that's where Ruberoid Thick-Butt Shingles are extra heavy, with an added thick coating of saturant and mineral granules. While giving you a stormproof, waterproof and fire-resistant roof, Thick-Butts also give your home a solid dignity with their heavy square-tab design in rich colors and blends with deep shadow lines. See us today about a Thick-Butt roof for your home!
