The Scottsville Story

Chapter V

By Bob Spencer

Surprisingly enough, Scottsville, in former days had a number of "small town" industries which were all important to the inhabitants of this little town at that time.

Travel, then, was quite slow and the possibility of getting essential products from other places was practically out of the question. Therefore, it is easy to see why these "small town" industries played such an important role in the community.

It is quite possible that the history of some such industries has not been recorded or probably forgotten but, records of the chief ones have been kept and "old time" residents either remember or recall being told about them. The names of these industries explain the type of work that was carried on by them and therefore, very little may be said about them.

A tobacco factory operated in an old brick building on Valley Street which was later used as a braid factory. This building now houses Parr's Furniture Store. The tobacco factory, which operated as late as 1880, manufactured plug and chewing tobacco. Two of the brands were "Tuberos" and "Mason's Select."

Before the invention of the kerosene lamp or the electric light, candles were the only source of light for homes after darkness had fallen. Candles for Scottsville residents were manufactured in the candle factory which was located just off of Main Street on the old canal basin. The factory was burned by Sheridan's men during the latter part of the Civil War.

Earlier in the Scottsville Story, it was mentioned that Scottsville was once an important shipping center for products grown in the valley. Many of these products were shipped in barrels. Barrel hoops were made in the Cooper shop which was located on the corner of Warren Street, which runs by the Presbyterian Church and Harrison Street.

The Scottsville Foundry and Machine Works, which was in operation as late as the 1880's was located in a frame building, on the corner of Main Street and the road to the ferry. The road which then lead to the ferry is the one which now leads to the bridge over the James River. At this establishment, plow castings and other implements for use on farms, were made.

White bricks were made at the brick yard which was located in former days on the opposite side of the river from Scottsville near Snowden Farm.

The Scottsville Woolen Mills was located near the junction of the "Plank Road" and the Warren Road. It is believed that this mill was operated by an experienced man who probably ran the mill for a larger company.

Since Scottsville was founded, several flour mills have been located here to which the farmers in this area brought wheat and corn to be made into flour and corn meal. The first flour mill was located on Mink Creek just below the building which houses the town's water works. This was burned during Sheridan's Raid. Heath's Mill, another mill which was built here burned by natural combustion. The present mill was established in 1911.

The fact that Scottsville residents have always kept up with the news of local happenings is evidenced by the number of newspapers which have existed here. The first in this line was "The Register", which was established in 1804. The name was later changed to "The Courier". In 1904 the paper became "The Scottsville Enterprise" and in 1920 the

Mrs. Henrietta Black Parrish

100-Year-Old Fluvanna County Woman Finds Interest In Family Circle; Always Early Riser

By Elizabeth Wimer

It is easy to see at least one reason why Mrs. Henrietta Black Parrish of Cunningham has passed the century mark and is still happily entertaining company as she sits humming in her rocking chair. Life has neither stopped nor turned back for her. When asked about her memories as a child, when the Civil War was making an impression on hundreds of little children all through the south, she said that was too far back to remember. In fact, she added, "I'm not even sure that I am 100 years old." This, however, we took to mean that she certainly doesn't feel 100, since county records have proved her birthday as May 30, 1853. It is her sunny disposition and her interest in what is going on in her family circle that is sure to be part of her secret of old age. She does not dwell in the past, and up until recent years, has led an active life. It was her habit to get up at four o'clock and have a large part of her work on the farm and in the house done by breakfast time for most people.

Mrs. Parrish has spent all of her life in Fluvanna County. She is the daughter of the late Washington Lewis and Lucy Thurston Black. The latter lived to be 100 years and 17 days old. Mrs. Parrish is now the oldest citizen in the county. She was next to the youngest of a large family, none of whom are now living.

In speaking of her girlhood during the war, she recalled the names of two slaves, Henry and Lucy, who were brought up by her parents. She also said that her oldest brother, James, was killed during the war between the states. She has also spoken of how she helped to weave wool and cotton cloth from the raw materials raised on her father's farm.

But much more interesting to Mrs. Parrish is the life of her grandchildren and great grandchildren. She has four living children, Charles T. Parrish of Cunningham, Mrs. Howard Glass of Fork Union, Mrs. C. E. Winks of Scottsville and Walter Parrish of Newport News, 16 grandchildren and 26 great grandchildren. She makes her home in the same house she came to as a bride, although it has been enlarged and remodelled over the years. Her son, Charles, and his family live with her, and she still looks after her teenage twin grandchildren, Annie and Charlie Parrish. She likes to know what they are doing, and jokes and laughs with them. She still has a quick retort for anyone who teases her, and when her granddaughter asked her why she thought she had lived to be so old, she replied with the question, "Why are you so young?" as though it were rather a foolish question. However, Mrs. Parrish has her serious moments, and is a deeply religious woman. All her children and grandchildren were taught to read the Bible at home and she has been a faithful member of the Cunningham Methodist Church until she was unable to attend it regularly.

Her husband, George L. Parrish, also a native of Fluvanna, died in 1940.

While she has "no aches or pains," she is not as strong as she used to be, which is understandable. But she can help to shell peas for dinner, and makes up her own bed, which her husband carved from cherry wood when they were first married. Once in a while someone takes her for a visit with one of her many relatives around the county, but she will not spend the night anywhere because she "likes her own bed better."

On May 31 Mrs. Parrish celebrated her birthday with a huge party. There was a table full of birthday cakes, many fine gifts, which she still enjoys looking at, and 117 guests present to congratulate her. Dinner was served on the lawn and nobody had a better time than "Grandma."

Farm Quiz Winner

The farm of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Oslin was the winner in last week's Scottsville Sun Farm Photo Quiz. It is located about seven miles from Scottsville on the Howardsville road and was formerly known as the Buffry place.

Mrs. Oslin, who called at the Sun office with her grandson, said that the picture was identified by a friend, Miss Rosa Gibbs, of Howardsville, who told them about it immediately. Mrs. Oslin was presented with 14 $1 gift certificates and a framed aerial photograph of the farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Oslin have owned their farm for 9 years and do general farming. Mr. Oslin is now building a gristmill which he hopes will be completed by fall.

Watch the farm photo feature in this newspaper each week. Next time you may be the winner!

Johnson Named To Welfare Board

Appointment of Elmer Johnson, assistant manager of the United States Rubber plant at Scottsville, as a member of the Albemarle County Welfare Board was made last week by the Albemarle Board of Supervisors.

Mr. Johnson succeeds Campbell Holt of Scottsville, whose term expired June 30. Mr. Holt served nine years on the welfare board, but declined reappointment this time.

Homecoming Scheduled

Homecoming will be held at Antioch Baptist Church on Sunday, July 26. The Rev. J. P. Guley, pastor of the Del Ray Baptist Church, at Alexandria, will be guest speaker at the services. Lunch will be served on the church grounds. Special music will be by the Phillips Family and will include both a chorus and a quartet. The music will be under the direction of Capt. G. R. Edgerton. An invitation is extended to all friends of the church to attend the Homecoming services.

Revel services will begin at Antioch on Monday evening, July 27 and will continue through Friday, July 31. Rev. Everett L. Branham, pastor of the First Guyan-dotte Baptist Church, of Huntington, W. Va. will conduct the services each evening.

Trial Justice Court

Seven cases were heard by Judge Sidney Watson at Trial Justice Court held here on Thursday, July 16.

Two brothers, George and Walker Herndon, were charged with being drunk in public on June 3. Town Sgt. F. F. Marsh testified that he noticed the two brothers walking across the street very unsteady on their feet. A car was approaching and without paying any attention to it the two crossed in front of it. Marsh said he watched them for a while and saw them do the same thing again. This is when he made the arrest. Stuart Napier, a witness, testified that he had seen George Herndon stagger into a parked car just before Sgt. Marsh made the arrest. Walker Herndon declared that he was not drunk, but was just in town buying groceries for the Fourth of July week-end. George Herndon's story coincided with his brother's with the exception that he stated that he had four beers while in town that day. Judge Watson dismissed the charge against Walker Herndon, but fined George Herndon $5 and costs.

Bernice Herndon, charged on the 13th day of July with unlawful drunkenness in public, was given a $10 fine and a 30 day suspended jail sentence pending 3 months good behavior.

James T. Burkhead was fined $10 and costs for driving a vehicle without an operator's license.

43 Fluvanna County 4-H Members Attend Camp

4-H Club members from Amherst, Fluvanna, Cumberland and Prince Edward Counties, along with their extension service personnel and club leaders, enjoyed last week at the 4-H Camp at Holliday Lake. There were 43 club members from Fluvanna County in the camp.

Each minute of the day from reveille at 7:15 a.m. to taps at 10:00 p.m. is filled with instruction and recreation.

Each camper is assigned to one of four tribes and compete among themselves for camp honors and awards. Points are given for winning athletic events such as swimming, softball, volleyball, and horseshoe pitching. To further competition among the tribes, points are also given for the best exhibition in handicraft, best job in cleaning up the grounds, bath houses, mess hall and cabins.

Each morning the campers attend classes on various subjects. The camp officials spent considerable time in planning a well-balanced course of instruction taught by competent instructors.

The afternoons are spent in various forms of recreation such as swimming and softball. After supper vesper services are held, the flag is lowered, and the campers are assembled in the dining room for their nightly recreation period. At this time, various stunts are performed by individuals as well as groups. Then to bed for a tired but happy group of boys and girls.

The 4-H Camp has accommodations for 200 persons. Each summer the counties in Central Virginia District send their quota of 4-H Club members for instructions and fun for a week's stay.

Household Hints

Appalachian Electric Power Co.
LET A ROOM AIR CONDITIONER
KEEP SUMMER HEAT OUT OF YOUR HOME

You don't have to rely on air-conditioner stores, hotels and movies for a little relief from summertime heat and humidity.

With a room air conditioner installed in your bedroom or living room window (or both), you can work, sleep—or just plain relax—in cool, fresh air this summer, right in your own home.

Contrary to the belief of many people, the General Electric Consumers Institute points out, air-conditioned air is truly fresh air. Under normal operation, a room air conditioner pulls in fresh outside air, and in addition to cooling, the unit removes excess moisture, filters out dust and dirt, and reduces air-borne pollen. The units can also be utilized during seasons when room cooling is not necessary by operating only the ventilating fan with the air damper open to bring in fresh air, or by recirculating room air with the damper closed.

Over-cooling, as in some theater installations, is not healthy, but with proper application, room air conditioning is comfortable and beneficial to everybody. Once the unit has been turned on, an adjustable thermostat turns the refrigerating mechanism off when the room temperature drops to the selected level and sets it into operation again when the temperature rises two or three degrees above that level. A ventilating fan continues to circulate room air after the refrigerating mechanism has been cut off.

Medical authorities stress the beneficial results of air conditioning, particularly for cardiac patients who suffer in hot, humid weather, or for hay fever or asthma victims who suffer from dust, dirt, or air-borne pollen.

Homemakers enjoy the convenience of dusting and vacuuming air-conditioned rooms less frequently, for all air passing through the unit is filtered of dust and dirt. And because other windows are kept closed at all times, an air-conditioned room is also more quiet, free from outside noises.

No Special Wiring Needed
Room air conditioners are plugged in appliances, and therefore require no special wiring, plumbing, or brackets. They are installed quickly and easily in double-hung windows and can be plugged into standard 110-volt electrical wall outlets. For those homes already equipped with 3-wire service, there are room air conditioners which operate on 220-volt service.

Cooling effectiveness of a room conditioner is dependent upon conditions of temperature, building construction, insulation, and whether the unit is on the sunny or shady side of the house. Generally speaking, however, under average conditions a 1/2 hp unit will comfortably cool a room of approximately 300 sq. ft. and a 3/4 hp unit a room of approximately 500 sq. ft.

Choosing a dealer in whom you can place complete confidence is of utmost importance, for he will tell you what size unit is necessary to do an efficient cooling job under your home conditions, and will see that the unit is properly installed. Before you purchase a unit, he will come to your home to estimate your load requirements, check for sufficient voltage, and be sure the circuit is properly and safely fused.

If you let a reliable dealer help you select your room air conditioner and the window in which it can best be installed, you can pass this summer and many summers to come in complete, air-conditioned comfort.

Ramblings

What with the corn leaves curling, the grass crunching beneath our feet, and the way we bite the dust while driving on a dirt road, it wouldn't be such a silly idea to dig a few irrigation ditches along the rows of vegetables, if water could be piped into them from a nearby creek or from a plentiful well. I do not know exactly how it is done in the dry valleys of the west, but after living in Utah where arid land was made to produce full, green crops, it is a wonder to me that folks just sit around and pray for rain when there is so much water in lakes and streams around this part of the country. Flower gardens in many localities would be impossible if it weren't for a sprinkling system or at least a garden hose. Mother Nature is too capricious at times to rely upon too strongly.

This is the time when movie cameras come out of their cases and pictures are shot of vacation doings to be shown to the folks back home during the following months. Who has ever raised the temptation of running a film showing somebody diving into the water backwards, so the subject rises out of the water and back on the board? We have a film of our dog chasing a stick. It looks much trickier to show him pick up the stick, run a long ways backward, and then toss the stick up in the air.

All of which was brought to this rambling mind by the following story (joke)—

It was a dark and stormy night, and the freight train had pulled into a siding. As the brakeman signaled to the engineer, he dropped his lantern. The switchman on the ground caught it and tossed it back to the man on top of the car.

A few minutes later the engineer rushed up.
"Let's see you do that again," he demanded.
"Do what?" asked the brakeman.
"Jump from the top of that boxcar to the ground and back up again."
It is too hot to even "ramble" much. Perhaps by the time this goes to press it will be raining... we hope—we hope.

Wheat Growers To Vote August 14 Concerning Marketing Quotas For 1954

Wheat growers will be given a chance on August 14 to endorse or reject marketing quotas for their 1954 crop which were recently proclaimed by Secretary of Agriculture, Ezra Taft Benson.

Marketing quotas on wheat have not been in effect since 1942, although acreage allotment program, a less strict form of controlling wheat production, was in operation for the one year 1950.

Here is the reason for the referendum, as explained by P. A. Lewis, State Chairman of the Production and Marketing Administration, under whose direction the wheat vote will be conducted in Virginia.

"The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, requires the Secretary of Agriculture to proclaim wheat marketing quotas on a crop when the total supply at the beginning of the preceding marketing year exceeds the normal supply by more than 20 per cent," Lewis said. "On July 1, the beginning of the 1953 marketing year, there were 1,717,000,000 bushels of wheat already harvested or in prospect of being harvested. This is the largest supply in the Nation's history."

"The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that a normal supply for this year would be 1,156,000,000. This means that our total supply of wheat exceeds our normal supply by 48 per cent. Under such conditions it is mandatory that the Secretary call upon farmers to vote on the imposition of production controls in the form of marketing quotas."

For quotas to be in effect, they must be approved by at least two-thirds of the eligible growers voting in the referendum. Lewis explained that an eligible voter will be one who has a 1954 wheat acreage allotment larger than 15 acres or a farmer who states that he intends to plant more than 15 acres of wheat for grain for 1954. Farmers who grew wheat in one of the past three years will receive an acreage allotment before the referendum date, as well as new farmers who grew no wheat the past three years but who applied for an allotment before June 30, 1953.

If quotas are approved by at least two-thirds of the farmers voting in the referendum, acreage allotments will be in effect on all wheat seeded for grain. Each farmer must seed within his farm acreage allotment to be eligible for price support, which is guaranteed at 90% of parity. A farmer who does not comply with his acreage allotment is not eligible for price support, the PMA Chairman pointed out. He further noted that a farmer with wheat acreage allotment larger than 15 acres is subject to a marketing quota penalty on all wheat produced on acreage in excess of his farm acreage allotment. Other growers with more than 15 acres of wheat will also be subject to marketing quota penalties. The penalty is at a rate equal to 45% of parity on the excess production.

Should wheat farmers reject marketing quotas for 1954, price support would automatically drop from 90% to 50% of parity for those growers planting within their acreage allotments. Growers exceeding their acreage allotment would not be subject to marketing penalties, but would receive no price supports.

The National wheat acreage allotment for 1954 has been established by Congress at 62,000,000 acres compared with a planted wheat acreage for 1953 of 77,500,000; thus the acreage cut amounts to about 20%. There is no certainty that the Virginia wheat allotment for 1954 will be exactly 20% below the 332,000 acres produced this year. State acreage allotments are computed for the purpose of the marketing quota program on the basis of individual county production history as determined from PMA and Bureau of

Hyperkeratosis Discussed by National Committee

Up-to-date information on hyperkeratosis (X-disease) of cattle is forthcoming from a national technical committee which met recently at Pennsylvania State College.

Dr. Wilson E. Bell, veterinarian at VPI who last year established highly chlorinated naphthalene compounds of the disease, and who attended the committee meeting, said that potential losses had been greatly reduced over what might have resulted from livestock pelleted feeds, had the research done by cooperating groups not been available.

Although research has indicated a cause, considerable loss occurred in some herds of cattle last year. Dr. Bell says much of the disease can be prevented by feed manufacturers and farmers using present research results. Farmers should keep livestock away from grease. Occasionally, used crank-grease oil will contain chlorinated naphthalene and has been known to cause the condition. A search must be continued for other harmful substances, although many chemicals have already been tested.

Dr. Bell said the commercial wood preservatives made in this country do not contain chlorinated naphthalene, the only proved cause of the disease. There are many things which will cause a local irritation of the skin, and these local skin changes have often been mistaken for, or confused with X-disease.

Likewise, insecticides produced, approved, and sold in this country for use on cattle and livestock forage do not contain chlorinated naphthalene.

Dr. Bell says cattle owners who suspect poisoning from the chlorinated naphthalene should consult their veterinarian as an accurate and early diagnosis may prevent much additional loss.

Research on use of mineral oil to control tobacco suckers reported by VPI Station

What about the use of mineral oil to control suckers on tobacco? That's the question being widely asked these days by tobacco growers, and although researchers at the Chatham branch of VPI Agricultural Experiment Station are not yet ready to make definite recommendations, they do report on three years of studying the matter. They say in 1952 some Virginia growers damaged their tobacco by using mineral oil. Losses have generally been attributed to the application of too much oil.

However, results at Chatham showed that: about 1/4 teaspoonful of heavy weight white mineral oil or 1/2 teaspoonful heavy mineral oil emulsion and water gave effective control and did not injure the plants.

Some plants were burned severely when light weight oils and other materials were used, and excess amounts such as a teaspoonful of oil per plant caused severe damage—losses up to 40 percent of plants either severely burned or killed from soft rot and stalk burn.

Results of laboratory analysis and tests made from tobacco from treated plants have not revealed any harmful effects.

Yields and acre values have been about the same where suckers were controlled by mineral oil, as where removed by hand.

Recommendations generally are to limit use of sucker control materials to a trial basis until growers have learned to use the treatments.

Rotate Garden Area For Less Work, More Vegetables

By increasing the fertility of your garden, and maintaining the high fertility level with a green manure crop and fertilizers, you can probably produce all the vegetables your family needs on a smaller area.

Garden specialists at VPI say do it by "garden rotation". In a two-year rotation plant half the garden in a green manure crop, such as soybeans, and the other half in vegetables. The next year switch areas, putting vegetables where the green manure crop grew the year before and putting a green manure crop where the vegetables were grown.

By working the smaller area, you save labor needed to plant and cultivate. And rotating the crops will help control plant diseases. If the garden area is large, you may want to consider a three-year rotation in which there is a vegetable garden, green manure crop, and chicken range each year on the present garden site.

Farmers' Field Days Planned at Station

Research underway on corn, forage crops, and pasture will get top billing at a series of field days for farmers at outlying substations of VPI Agricultural Experiment Station this summer and fall.

Research plots dealing with weed control, tobacco, and other crops also will be inspected. Outlines of the projects will be distributed, and staff members will be on hand to answer any questions.

The field days are scheduled for: Chatham, July 24; Charlotte, August 11; Holland, August 13; Warsaw, August 18; Orange, August 19; Staunton, August 20; Emory, August 21; Middleburg, September 4; and VPI, September 18.

SERVING THE PEOPLE OF THE TOWN OF SCOTTSVILLE AND THE NEIGHBORING COMMUNITIES IN ALBEMARLE, FLUVANNA AND BUCKINGHAM COUNTIES

Intercontinental Cooperation

A few days after we celebrated our 177th anniversary of independence, Canada also celebrated the anniversary of her founding as a self-governing nation.

There is a pleasant symbolism in the fact that these two observances came on almost identical dates. For no nations on earth have shown, over the years, greater friendliness, solidarity and mutual respect than exists between Canada and the United States.

The two governments have worked amicably together in solving common problems in peace and war. And so have major enterprises within the countries. For instance, both Canada and the United States, being vast land areas, are greatly dependent on rail transportation. And the railroads of both nations work together through mutual and cooperative agreements, making possible a continent-wide flow of raw materials and finished products. They exchange ideas, to the benefit of all concerned.

This is certainly an outstanding example of international cooperation. Would there were more of it throughout this troubled world!

Country Lawyer

By Walter Johnson

In accordance with expectations for such abuse of power and that Mr. Stanley has been given the Democrat Nomination for Governor. The inner circle had decided it was his turn and that was that. His opposition, Mr. Fenwick, is a fine gentleman but a mere "Me too" as to machine rule and as a result the campaign was lacking in color or interest.

But now that the intra-party campaign is over and the inter-party campaign starts things should be more lively and more of interest. The Republicans have a very good slate of candidates composed of State Senator Ted Daton of Radford for Governor; Stephen Timberlake of Staunton for Lieutenant Governor; and Walter Hoffman of Norfolk for Attorney General. This is a good team of capable men well experienced as campaigners and in the internal affairs of Virginia.

The Republican platform, like all such platforms, contains a weak plank or two but in the main is a good one. It is a liberal platform if we use the word "liberal" in its proper sense; in the sense of recognizing greater participation by the people in Government.

The Republicans stand to take the Circuit Judges out of politics by taking from them all appointive power except the strictly judicial power. If this objective can be accomplished a rather large step toward tempering political-minded Judges will have been made. Our courts should be wholly released from party and intra-party politics. The whole concept of fair and impartial justice demands just that.

The Republicans stand to give the people a voice in our educational system by permitting school board elections by the people. That is a reform greatly needed in Virginia. The people pay for the schools out of their taxes; they depend on the schools for the education of their children; and the people should have a prominent and controlling direct voice in the management and direction of the system of schools.

The Republicans stand for restoring voting as a recognized basic right of free men instead of it being reduced to a privilege sold to the people for money like that of hunting or keeping a dog. The poll tax must be repealed.

The state compensation board needs a going over. It stands suspected of using control over salaries to encourage elected county officers to stay in line. Whether or not that is true is beside the point which is that the door is wide open

YOUR SENATOR

A. WILLIS ROBERTSON

PRESIDENTIAL LUNCHEON GUESTS GET MSA FACTS

President Eisenhower was worried last week about the fate of his foreign aid bill and invited members of the Senate Appropriations Committee to a White House luncheon at which he and General Alfred M. Gruenther, Supreme Allied Commander for Europe, discussed mutual assistance problems.

I came away agreeing with the remark of Senator Russell that the President "sets a good table." I also agreed with the President and General Gruenther as to the importance to a free world of our MSA program. But I was equally convinced by the testimony of experts who testified before our Committee that, as I indicated in this column last week, a cut of one billion dollars below the amount authorized will not impair the effectiveness of this program.

I was influenced particularly by testimony that it will be physically impossible for us to actually deliver to our allies during the current fiscal year much more than five billion dollars of military supplies. There is an unexpended balance of ten billion dollars of MSA funds in addition to this year's appropriation and even allowing for the need to let contracts long in advance, I felt there would be no shortage of essential funds as a result of the cut I advocated.

At our luncheon the President apologized for bringing up a business matter on such an occasion, saying this was the first time he had done so. He said he had no desire to put pressure on any member of the Senate but wanted us to hear General Gruenther explain the progress made in forming a NATO Army and the vital importance of that program as part of our effort to prevent another world war.

General Gruenther said that while Russian land and air forces still had numerical superiority in Europe, the forces provided by the twelve nations which signed the NATO Treaty developed to a point where they would not be a "push-over" if attacked. He also spoke of developments in our effort including the almost unparalleled revolt of unarmed workers in East Germany, the purge of Beria in Russia and other evidences of domestic trouble in Russia and her satellites.

We were told that although the logic of the situation was against Russia starting a war in Europe this year, General Gruenther did not feel the Russian leaders had abandoned the Lenin-Stalin concept of world domination and he felt they would continue to try to cause disunity among the NATO nations and to cause economic crises here and elsewhere by their cold war tactics.

The President spoke of the vital need, in the interests of our own future safety, for preventing Russia from gaining control of the skilled workers of Western Europe who outnumber the workers in the United States. He spoke also of the importance of having allies in Western Europe who, in event of war, would be fighting to protect their own homelands.

The luncheon served us was really a dinner, starting with watermelon balls seasoned with finely chopped mint and lime rickey, followed by broiled steak from a Texas steer, broccoli with sauce, baked tomatoes, hot rolls and a wonderful chopped lettuce salad which included a liberal amount of Roquefort cheese, sliced stuffed olives, orange cubes and seasonings. The dessert was peach shortcake on old-time biscuits with plenty of whipped cream followed by coffee and Havana cigars.

Two quick looks tell you:
Here's your smartest water heater buy!

LOOK HERE

No flues or vents! An electric water heater doesn't need 'em...there just aren't any fumes or soot to be carried away. No heat lost up the chimney. Installs anywhere. Trimmer appearance. Only an ELECTRIC water heater offers these advantages!

LOOK HERE

No pilot light! That means it's electric, too. It means heat's applied from within. It means maximum safety and cleanliness. Only an ELECTRIC water heater offers this advantage.

Yes...look twice before you buy.

ELECTRIC offers MORE. See your dealer!
