The Scottsville Story

By Bob Spencer

Chapter III

Just after the Civil War period more emphasis began to be placed on public education for children. The first teachers to arrive in the town of Scottsville probably taught in private homes. Sometimes neighbors would unite to support the teachers by providing meals and a place to stay. Usually classes were held in one of the rooms of a home or in a building in the yard of the home at which the teachers stayed.

A number of public schools were established in Virginia about 1870. The public school idea was well accepted throughout the community. The first graded school was opened in the old factory where Parr's Furniture Store is currently located. Later the school was moved to the council building. This large brick building, which formerly stood on the lot next to where the Post Office now is, housed the public school for nearly 30 years. In 1906 the school was moved to what is known to Scottsvillians as "School House Hill". This is the hill located behind Victory Hall and Bruce-Dorrier Motor Company.

Public education has developed greatly since the days of the one room school. Scottsville High School has kept up with the times. Scottsville was the first high school to be placed on the accredited list in 1913 by the University of Virginia and the State Dept. of Education.

Until recent years formal commencement exercises were held at Victory Hall for members of the graduating class.

By stressing a system of honor athletics, physical training and placing emphasis on "working together", Scottsville High has produced citizens that have brought credit to the school in higher institutions of learning, as teachers, and in business positions. The school has held high the standards of a well earned education and one to be proud of, rather than an elaborate one which is so likely to be taken for granted and little appreciated.

Scottsville has always placed high in athletics and outdoor activities. In former days, Field Day events were held on the field beyond the Presbyterian cemetery which belongs to C. A. Stone. In more recent years, "Rally Day" was held at Lambeth Field at the University of Virginia for students of all Albemarle County Schools. This was discontinued after 1949. The cabinet of cups and trophies in Scottsville High School is proof enough that Scottsville has won more than its share of such events. In May 1952, the first May Day in 29 years was held at S. H. S.

The present Scottsville High School, which was built in 1925, consists of fifteen rooms and an auditorium. In addition to this building, there is a primary school and a building in which courses in agriculture and shopwork are taught.

Scottsville has an active Parent-Teacher Association which meets regularly during the time school is in session. In 1946 a Commercial department was added to the school. Here classes in typing, shorthand, filing and bookkeeping are taught. "The Ripples", the school newspaper, is published monthly by the Commercial Club and "The Scotty", the school yearbook, is published yearly by the Publications Club. For the past two years a course in Driver-Education has been offered.

Game Rained Out

Scottsville and Shipman ball teams, playing on the Shipman diamond, were rained out Sunday in the fifth inning. Final score was 0-0.

YOUNG CHARGES OF THE MISSES ANN SMITH AND LUCY POWERS gather under a tree to pose for their picture at the close of nursery school on the primary school grounds at Scottsville. Due to their tender age and inability to stand still for long, the photographer was unable to identify each one by name in order of appearance. Pictured in the group are: Roger Dale Wood, Mary Curtis Conrad, Kent Carter, Bruce and Richard Dorrier, Martha Alice Golladay, Beth Goodwin, Judy Golladay, Kit and Irene Dorrier, Beth Goodwin, Karen Johnson, Bobby King, Johnny Gunther, Marvin Roberts, Sandra Roberts, Ralph Rush, Barry and D. G. Van Clief, Marilyn Ownby and Cenie Ree Moon. Not pictured are four other pupils, Lynn and Susan Cohen, John Pat Carrol, Beverly Taylor and Michael Viar.

Scottsville Nursery School Plays Important Part In Lives Of Pre-School Children

"The Nursery School" in Scottsville, which was started from modest beginnings and the inspiration of two modest ladies, is an important factor in the lives of many local mothers and their pre-school youngsters.

Miss Lucy Powers and Miss Ann Stith accomplish what mothers sometimes can't with children who are learning their first lessons in getting along with one another. Tots from the ages of 2½ to 6 attend the nursery school five mornings each week from March until December, and get their first taste of what it means to get along together and to "share", as Miss Powers describes it. The children sing songs, join in games, listen to stories, and while there is no pre-school teaching, they are taught manners and better how to adjust themselves when they do go to school.

The school started in the Baptist Sunday School room in 1947 with 14 pupils. It now meets during the school year in the Methodist Church and has an enrollment of about 25. During the summer months the children go to the Scottsville primary school where they spend much time out of doors on the grounds with ample room and play equipment.

Miss Smith and Miss Powers are whole-heartedly interested in the behavior and welfare of their small charges. The school has become increasingly successful from year to year, not by any promotion from its two teachers, but through the highest praise from mothers whose children have attended it.

Howardsville Man Receives Award

Mr. Bill Saunders (right) manager of the Western Union office at Lynchburg, presents Mr. David Day of Howardsville with a $50 U. S. Defense Bond as third prize in the international Western Union Telegraph Slogan contest.

Third prize of $50 in Western Union's international telegraph slogan contest for employees was won by David Day, a retired employee of Western Union in New York now residing in Howardsville, it was announced today.

His winning slogan, "Save Time — Telegraph" was picked from more than 15,000 entries. Mr. Day was presented with a $50 U. S. Defense Bond by Bill Saunders, Lynchburg Western Union man-

The purpose of the contest was to find a new telegraph slogan to replace "Don't Write—Telegraph" which has appeared on thousands of Western Union branch office windows, nationwide, since 1917. A second slogan, "Western Union Everywhere" was adopted in 1934. The oldest contestant was an 84 year old, retired woman pensioner in New Orleans. The shortest slogan submitted was, "WU!"

School Improvements 2 Students Named Here Are Discussed To Attend Boys' And Girls' State

About ten members of the Scottsville Parent-Teacher Association met Thursday night with a committee from the Albemarle County School Board at Scottsville High School to discuss plans for improvements to the Scottsville primary and high school buildings.

The improvement program, which will be more thoroughly outlined at the regular county school board meeting today, includes plans for improving the athletic field, a new heating system, better sanitary facilities, and the possible addition of a room for the primary school. Other improvements in the high school building were proposed, but not definitely stated.

Among members of the local PTA was John Williamson, president for next year. The school board committee which was appointed to formulate plans for the next step in school improvements, included J. T. Henley, Chairman, Charles Waltz and F. E. Paulett.

Two Scottsville High School students will be among the hundreds of Virginia boys and girls who will attend the 1953 Old Dominion Boys' and Girls' State which will be held simultaneously at Virginia Polytechnic Institute the week of July 12-18. They are John Tyler, Jr. of Schuyler and Miss Phyllis Patterson of Esmont. Both will be Seniors next year. Tyler is being sent to Boys' State by the Scottsville Lions Club and Miss Patterson is being sponsored at Girls' State by the Scottsville P.T.A.

Old Dominion Boys' State and Old Dominion Girls' State are sponsored yearly by the American Legion. Their purpose is to help our State's youth to have a better understanding of how our town, county and State governments operate. This better understanding is accomplished through experience. The "citizens" of Boys' and Girls' States actually put government into action, complete with party caucuses, campaigning and elections, during the week they are together. Fellowship is also enjoyed as well as numerous other activities. All of this is supervised by experienced men and women who have given their time and efforts in order that the youth of our State might achieve the highest.

"Fairview Farms" in Fluvanna County, owned by Dr. John L. Manahan, was winner in last week's farm photo quiz which is featured weekly in this paper.

Dr. Manahan received his framed aerial photograph of the farm as one of the prizes, along with 14 $1 gift certificates from the advertisers on the page.

One of the farm workers recognized the picture of Fair View, which includes 990 acres. Two breeds of registered cattle are raised on the farm, as well as all purebred stock of hogs, sheep and poultry.

The Manahans have lived here for 11 years, Dr. Manahan having bought it 21 years ago.

Homecoming

Homecoming will be held at Fluvanna Baptist Church on Sunday, July 12. Rev. W. Rush Loving, Field Secretary for the University of Richmond, will be the speaker at the morning service. Lunch will be served on the church grounds. During the afternoon a meeting of the Memorial Cemetery Association of the church will be held. All friends of the church are invited to attend these Homecoming services.

Revival services will begin at Fluvanna Baptist Church on Sunday, July 13 and will continue through Friday, July 17. Rev. Robert Hall of Buckingham will conduct the services.

Following the ceremony, open house was held for friends of the couple. The table was decorated with white gladioli and candles. A large crowd attended the open house. Mrs. R. E. Tanner served as official hostess and those who poured were Mrs. Guy Moon, Mrs. Jack Taylor, Mrs. Grover Cleveland and Mrs. Henry Batten.

Household Hints

By Betty J. Minnick

Appalachian Electric Power Co.

In order to protect foods stored in a home freezer from oxidation and from drying out they must be wrapped or packaged in a material which will not allow air or moisture to get out of the package. Ordinary paper or cardboard is not satisfactory for the purpose. Following is a brief description of frozen food packaging materials which are approved. They are not listed in order of preference.

- 1. Aluminum Foil—For irregularly shaped foods such as meat, fish, fowl, cakes, pies, etc. Recommend drug store wrap. Mold foil around product to eliminate air. No stockinette necessary. Requires special pencil or ink to label or tie tag to package. Reusable if handled carefully. Must be at least .0015" thick. Thinner foil is sold for ordinary household usage but is too fragile for freezer usage.
- 2. Cellophane—for same purposes as aluminum foil. Use drug store wrap and protect with stockinette. Heat sealing gives best results but is not essential. Label by inserting card inside of stockinette or tie tag to package. Not generally reusable.
- 3. Pliofilm—for same purposes as aluminum foil. Use same as cellophane. Heat sealing more difficult than cellophane unless a special heat sealing device is used. Pliofilm is generally reusable.
- 4. Polyethylene—for same purposes as aluminum foil. Use same as cellophane except that stockinette is not required to protect the poly-ethylene (as it is with cellophane and Pliofilm) but is still desirable in order to eliminate air pockets within the package. Package can be held together with string or tape. Heat sealing same as with Pliofilm. Polyethylene is reusable and is very rugged and pliable even at 0 d. F.

5. Bags (without cartons) made of cellophane, Pliofilm or polyethylene—for irregularly shaped foods such as meat, fish, poultry, etc., and for dry packaging of vegetables. Cellophane bags should be made of two thicknesses for strength. Bags come nearest to being all-purpose packaging material but are not recommended for liquids because of difficulty in handling before freezing and because the weight of liquid may burst a seam of the bag. Cellophane bags should be heat sealed. Pliofilm and polyethylene bags can be sealed by heat sealing or by twisting the top of the bag and tying it in a knot or folding it over into a gooseneck and fastening with string or rubber band. Polyethylene bags are definitely reusable. Pliofilm generally reusable if handled with moderate care. Cellophane bags are generally not reusable.

6. Waxed folding cartons—Must use bag or liner of cellophane, Pliofilm or Polyethylene. For dry packaging of vegetables or for cuts of meat and fish small enough to fit. The box is lightly waxed and gives some additional protection against drying out but its main functions are to protect the liner from being torn and to make for easy stacking. Such cartons are compact when not in use thus conserving kitchen storage space. They are available for fitting from one end or from one side like a chest. Special wire racks and funnels are available for conveniently filling such packages.

7. Heavily waxed cartons—for liquid or dry pack. No liner required. Available in various sizes as follows:

A. Tub-shaped with slanting sides and dish-like snap-in lid. Easy to fill and contents can be removed without complete thawing. Stack well in the freezer and can be nested together when empty to save kitchen storage space. Being round, they waste space in the freezer as compared with square cartons.

B. Square carton with full opening top and plastic cover. Sides of carton are tapered permitting easy removal of food without thawing and also permits nesting when empty. Lid very easy to apply and remove. Lid is reusable indefinitely and cartons can be purchased without lids. Stacks well in freezer because bottom of carton nests into lid of carton beneath it.

8. Molded plastic container—for liquid or dry pack. Cover is flexible to provide good seal and is easily applied and removed. Entire container reusable indefinitely. Square with tapered sides make for nesting when empty and good stacking in freezer. Full-opening top permits removal of food without thawing. Non-breakable.

9. Heavy aluminum foil container—for liquid or dry pack. Not ideal for liquids because sides are not as rigid as previously described carton, making it slightly difficult to handle. Heavy foil lid is to be crimped on by user with special tool. Not difficult to do but more of a nuisance than other lids described previously. Not considered reusable because of crimped-on lid. Have tapered sides and are rectangular so they nest when empty, stack well and conserve space in the freezer. They have one advantage over all the other containers in that the frozen food can be cooked right in the same container in which it is frozen. Also, aluminum being a good heat conductor means that the food is frozen faster in this container than in the others. This is not too important but it is somewhat of an advantage.

10. Glass freezer jars—for liquid or dry pack. Specially designed for freezer use. Has full-open mouth so contents can be removed without thawing and has flat top so one can stack easily on another. Cannot be nested when empty. Round shape wastes space in freezer. Reusable indefinitely until broken. Incidentally, ordinary canning jars can be used in the freezer for foods which must be completely thawed before preparing for consumption.

The above descriptions refer to the basic materials of which good frozen food packaging materials are made. There are many different brands of most of these.

Cpl. Griffin Cited

WITH U. S. FORCES IN KOREA—The Commendation Ribbon for meritorious service in Korea was recently awarded to Army Cpl. William R. Griffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Griffin, Columbia, Va.

Corporal Griffin was cited for outstanding work as an aerial photograph interpreter. He analyzed photographs of enemy territory to learn where Communist ammunition dumps and other vital enemy points were hidden. This information was forwarded to units of the 5th Field Artillery Group, which blasted the strong-holds.

The Columbia corporal entered the Army in August 1951, took basic training at Indiantown Gap, Pa., and arrived in Korea last July.

In civilian life, Griffin attended Bluefield College and Virginia Polytechnical Institute and worked as a mechanical engineer for the Virginia Electric and Power Co., Richmond.

Clipping Cows Helps Produce Quality Milk

Clipping cows regularly is one of the first steps in producing clean, high quality milk.

Dr. G. C. Graf, head of the dairy department at VPI, says clipping saves 10 percent of the time when preparing udders for milking, and reduces sediment by preventing dirt accumulation — the chief source of sediment in the milk.

The cows are easier to keep clean since long hairs on the flank, udder, and belly make a good place for dirt to cling.

Furthermore, lice and ticks are easily controlled when the cows are kept clipped.

Clip the flanks of the cows back of a line from the tail head to the front attachment of the udder. Clip the entire udder. Clip the tail from the tail head to a point about 8 to 10 inches above the end of the tail bone. The switch of the tail may be shortened if it reaches the ground. If lice are present, an area about 6 inches wide along the backbone may be clipped. Then spray or dust this area for effective lice control.

Another tip — sharp clipper blades make the job easier.

2, 4-D Kills Honeysuckle
Don't kill honeysuckle indiscriminately — it has some uses.

Weed specialists at VPI say that in many locations, honeysuckle prevents erosion, provides cover for wildlife, and some forage for cattle when little else is available. Honeysuckle does contain some animal food nutrients; however, modern forage crops are much superior.

To kill honeysuckle where it is not wanted, use 2, 4-D at the rates suggested on the container. If there are also brambles and small woody bushes in the area to be cleared, a mixture of 2,4-D and 2, 4, 5-T will give better results.

Be careful when spraying 2,4-D about the home or near crops, as the spray may drift to other plants and damage them. Vapors from sprayed areas may injure very sensitive plants, such as tobacco, cotton, tomatoes, and vine crops.

Since it is hard to free sprayers of 2,4-D, the specialists suggest having a separate sprayer for killing weeds. Do not use it to spray insecticides and fungicides.

When And How

With few exceptions, everyone within the executive and legislative branches of the government believes that taxes on both individuals and businesses must be cut. The sole difference of opinion is over the question of when and how.

The Administration has taken the position that, desirable and essential as tax reduction is, it must wait until the budget is brought under control and is in or near a balance. Until relatively recently, it seemed that in all probability this position would prevail. That is not the case now. The Eisenhower tax program is in very real difficulties on the Congressional shoals.

There are two reasons for this. For one, public demand for early tax reduction is extremely strong—apparently the Congressional mail has been loaded with it. For another, Chairman Daniel A. Reed of the House Ways and Means Committee stands solidly for immediate tax cuts and all the efforts of Administration representatives to change his views have availed nothing. By virtue of this chairmanship, Mr. Reed is one of the most powerful men in the government when it comes to tax policy. The committee must originate all changes and renewals of our tax laws, and the chairman's authority is enormous.

Matters came to a head over the so-called excess-profits tax. This tax is about as unpopular as they come. President Eisenhower has denounced it. So has Senator Taft. So have practically all other authorities in and out of government. Almost all agree that the tax is a killer of initiative and enterprise, and that it is especially evil in that it is most burdensome to the smaller corporations and is an implacable obstacle to normal growth. Yet the Administration made extension of the tax for another six months one of the musts in its fiscal program. Two arguments can be used to justify that position. The first is that no source of government revenue should be abandoned just now—though this is a debatable argument in the case of the excess-profits tax, for the reason that many believe its abandonment would stimulate business expansion and activity to the point where the new revenue gained through income taxes would more than offset the losses. The second is that, for political reasons, it would be dangerous to materially reduce or eliminate a tax which is borne entirely by business unless taxes on individuals were also lightened at the same time. And the Administration cannot afford to overlook political matters in view of the fact that the entire House must stand for election next year.

On the other side, and still dealing with politics, there are leading Republicans, Representative Reed among them, who are convinced that if taxes are not cut all along the line, even before anything resembling a balanced budget is in sight, the GOP will take a bad beating in the off-year elections.

These points, of course, are speculations. What is not a speculation is that President Eisenhower's present tax program, for all of his vast standing and the affection and respect in which he is held by millions, is a far cry from a popular one. The advocates of immediate tax reduction may be wrong or they may be right—strong arguments can be marshalled on either side. But it is evident that they reflect a widespread and growing public feeling that the tax burden is becoming insupportable.

Country Lawyer

By Walter Johnson

There is much discussion over the nation about the so-called Bricker Amendment. This would amend the constitution of the United States so as to protect people against laws made by treaty instead of by our legislative bodies. Under article four, clause two of our federal constitution it is provided: "This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the Supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

Those mainly interested in preserving our system see in that power to make law by treaty a possible threat to our system in these days of rather slipshod making of treaties. We are in the cess at this time, in the minds of some, of establishing world government by the treaty-making process and it behooves us to look to our own protection. We do things differently and our way has been well tested and proven. For instance we protect Freedom of the press by prohibiting our congress from making any laws restricting the press. That is the simple and effective way and has worked well with us. On the other hand the world government group has adopted a proposal which proclaims that Freedom of the press is all right provided it is kept in accord with the public interest. That, of course, would give some one authority over the press to determine the question of public interest, and this is only one item used for illustrative purpose and which shows the need for something like and onw missionary to Hawaii.

the Bricker Amendment as a means of protecting our Freedom and our system.

Senator Bricker is having a time with his amendment. The President, speaking through the Attorney General, opposes the amendment as do all the one-world, one-government, one-ruler group. At the same time many patriotic citizens and groups are rallying to the support of Senator Bricker and certainly he needs all the support he can get in his patriotic endeavor.

It is a fact that many things can be done by treaty that cannot be done by law. An outstanding example is the situation affecting Migratory birds. Congress passed a law controlling the hunting of such fowl. This was declared to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. It was said by the court that regulation was not within the power of the Federal Government.

Thereupon the federal government entered into a treaty with Canada. By this act the Federal Government acquired power to regulate Migratory bird hunting. As a result all hunters of such birds are controlled in their conduct by bureaucratic regulations having the force and effect of law.

This may or may not be good. But the fact that the Federal Government can lay controls upon the people by use of the treaty-making power and which cannot be done by law presents a situation dangerous to our system.

In advancing the Bricker Amendment Senator Bricker is performing a very great and patriotic function. He deserves credit. And he deserves support by the people who have some regard for what was created here for us and who prefer to retain it.

Joseph Wilson To Attend Fork Union Next Year

Joseph O. Wilson, III, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Wilson, II, of Scottsville has been accepted for enrollment at Fork Union Military Academy, and he will enter that school for the first time in September.

While attending Fork Union, Wilson will study under the successful one-subject plan. This is the system which allows a student to concentrate all of his study time of an eight weeks' period on only one course, and to complete the year's work in that course before moving to a new topic.

The Scottsville boy will receive ROTC military training from U.S. Army officers assigned to the school. Fork Union Military Academy holds the Department of the Army's highest honor rating for prep schools.

Household Hints

Prepared mixes are such a help to the homemaker today that there is now a tendency to secure a series of recipes made from one basic mix. Some of the mixes are commercially prepared, others are made at home. Today let's prepare a Soda-Made Dessert Mix sent to us by Arm & Hammer Brand and Cow Brand Baking Soda.

Soda-Made Dessert Mix
 Yield: Approximately 10 cups mix
 6 cups sifted all-purpose flour
 1 tablespoon Arm & Hammer Brand or Cow Brand Baking Soda
 2 1/2 cups sugar
 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 1 1/2 cups shortening

Combine dry ingredients and sift together 4 times. Place in large mixing bowl. Add shortening and cut in with pastry blender or 2 knives until shortening is broken into very fine particles and mixture resembles coarse corn meal. Store in tightly covered container at room temperature.

For use in recipes, spoon mix lightly into measuring cup. Do not sift or shake down. Level off carefully.

Cottage Pudding
 Yield: 1 8-inch square cake
 3 1/2 cups Soda-Made Dessert Mix
 1 egg
 1/4 cup white (distilled) vinegar
 1/4 cup milk
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

Measure Dessert Mix into mixing bowl. Combine remaining ingredients in a small bowl and beat thoroughly. Add to mix and beat until smooth (about 1 minute). This makes a rather stiff batter. Spread in a greased 8 x 8 x 2 inch cake pan. Bake at 375 d. F. (moderate oven) for 30 minutes. Serve warm with any desired pudding sauce.

Peach Cobbler
 Yield: 6 servings
 2 1/2 cups drained, sliced, canned peaches*
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
 1 1/2 cups Dessert Mix
 1 egg
 2 tablespoons white (distilled) vinegar
 2 tablespoons milk
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Place peaches in 8 x 8 x 2 inch baking pan. Sprinkle with lemon juice over peaches. Measure Dessert Mix into mixing bowl. Beat remaining ingredients together and stir into dry mix until smooth. Drop by spoonfuls on top of peaches and spread to cover them. Bake at 375 d. F. (moderate oven) 30 minutes. Serve warm with plain cream.

*Or use 3 cups sliced, fresh peaches sprinkled with 1/4 to 1/3 cup sugar, depending on tartness of peaches.

Steamed Fig Pudding
 Yield: 4-6 servings
 1 1/2 cups Dessert Mix
 4 ounces dried figs
 1 egg
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
 2 tablespoons white (distilled) vinegar
 1/4 cup milk

Measure Dessert Mix into mixing bowl. Cut stems from figs and put through food chopper using medium knife. Blend into mix. Combine remaining ingredients in small bowl and beat well. Add to dry mixture and beat until well blended. Turn into well-greased custard cups. Steam 45 minutes. Serve warm with lemon sauce.

Butterscotch Dumplings
 Yield: 6 servings
 Syrup: 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
 1 1/2 cups water
 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
 1/4 teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 Dumplings: 1 1/4 cups Dessert Mix
 1/2 cup chopped nut meats
 1 egg
 2 tablespoons white (distilled) vinegar
 2 tablespoons milk
 2 tablespoons vanilla extract

Combine all ingredients for syrup and bring to boil. Meanwhile to make dumplings—measure Dessert Mix into mixing bowl. Stir in nut meats. Beat egg, vinegar, milk and vanilla extract together. Stir into dry mixture and beat until smooth. Pour boiling syrup into a 1 1/2 x 7 3/8 x 1 1/2 inch baking dish. Drop dumpling dough by spoonfuls into hot syrup, making about 12 dumplings. Bake at 375 d. F. (moderate oven) about 30 minutes or until dumplings are browned. Serve warm with cream, if desired.

Sauces are the extra-touch with desserts so let's try a few.

Cottage Sauce
 Combine 1 cup firmly packed brown sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Stir in 2 cups boiling water. Boil 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Blend in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 2 teaspoons vinegar and a dash of nutmeg. Yield: 2 1/2 cups.

Lemon Sauce
 Blend 1/4 cup sugar, 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch and 1/8 teaspoon salt. Add 1 cup boiling water and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Stir in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind, 3 tablespoons lemon juice and 6 quartered marshmallows. Stir to melt marshmallows. Cool. Yield: 1 1/2 cups.

MUTUAL SECURITY CHANGES
PAVE WAY FOR MORE TRADE

Problems of international relations kept me fully occupied last week. In addition to participating in Senate action on the Mutual Security Authorization bill and a bill extending the Reciprocal Trade program, I had to prepare a speech for delivery at the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs this week on the subject: "Americanism Responsibility in the Free World".

We made some significant changes in the Mutual Security bill. In recognition of the fact that the nations of Western Europe generally have recovered from the devastation of World War II and some of them have increased their production substantially above pre-war levels, we served notice that this may be the last foreign aid bill the Congress will approve. The Senate bill ordered the Mutual Security Administration to cut off its programs in two years and to terminate its operations entirely by June 30, 1956.

We also gave notice of our concern over the failure of the nations of Western Europe to ratify the European Defense Compact and to build the defense forces which they had promised. Our bill authorized the President to withhold up to $1 billion of the authorized aid until the European Defense Community becomes a reality.

Another important Senate amendment gives the President authority to send surplus American farm crops abroad in an exchange arrangement to pay for arms purchases. The plan would be to use some of the money which is authorized for military assistance to buy our surplus crops. These crops would be shipped abroad and sold for the currency of the country in which they would be used, instead of for dollars, and then this currency would be used to pay for the supplies we would buy in those countries. These transactions would have to be conducted through private trade channels so there would be no question of our getting into a government barter program.

This plan of helping other nations to do business with us in spite of their lack of dollars will, we hope, help to pave the way for a permanent shift to the type of trade intended under our Reciprocal Trade program. Since the end of World War II we have been exporting an average of $5 billion a year more than we have imported and that has been possible only because we have been giving away dollars to make up the difference.

The Reciprocal Trade Program expired July 1st and passage of the extension bill was necessary before the President could make any new tariff arrangements. New arrangements should be made because the only alternatives to continuing foreign trade indefinitely are to reduce our exports or to increase our imports, with the latter greatly to be preferred.

It is particularly important, at a time when we are insisting on security controls by the free world on exports to the Soviet bloc, to get ourselves out of the inconsistent position of hampering by high tariffs and quota restrictions the efforts of our allies to sell to us. With their markets to the east cut off by the Iron Curtain and historic trade patterns destroyed the only great market left for Western Europe is the United States. We must help them to sell more to us if we expect them to continue to furnish the markets for cotton, grain and tobacco which are so important to our Virginia farmers and the machinery and other manufactured products which are important to our industrial areas.

Ramblings

Now at last comes a good word for women drivers from someone who should know, but it would take a lot of good words to make even a dent on the male opinion that a lady behind the wheel is a dangerous character. It is balm to some of "us wimmin" who have had to listen to many variations on the theme that men are far superior when it comes to operating a motor vehicle. Miss Jean Lee, head of the American Academy of Safe Driving, who coaches some 1,000 student drivers each year, says the average woman is more reliable behind the wheel than the average man. Of course, any man who might enter into such a controversy, would declare that the woman in question is not average. However, Miss Lee goes on to say that there would be fewer deaths on the highways if men would copy instead of cuss the lady driver. She attributes this female superiority to the fact, or maybe it is opinion, that women are less egotistical than men, and therefore speed less and are more careful. This seems to be a convincing argument, same as a comparison of manners will show that often a fertile subject the next time con-women are more conscious of the other fellow and think of good manners more often than their menfolk, who are bent on getting where they are going, and content to leave etiquette to the ladies. Too many accidents are caused by "show-offs", which is not a female trait.

Miss Lee says intellectuals and cab drivers are the worst people behind the wheel of a car. Intellectuals think too much, and cab drivers have no courtesy. Now there's often a fertile subject the next time conversation lags. Speaking of cabbies, we had an interesting experience in Washington a few weeks ago when we stepped into the first cab we came upon outside of a hotel, and the driver turned out to be a robust, if not rotund, woman driver. I do not know whether she was a lady or not, but she was as tough and capable of negotiating the city traffic as any of her male co-workers, and she charged more than any of the men drivers we

you need an electric range

That's right. Electric cooking is the coolest there is... and there are definite reasons why.

Heat from the surface unit on an electric range goes right to the bottom of the pot. It doesn't come up around the pot to heat the kitchen. And the oven is completely insulated.

Everyday 3123 families switch to electric cooking. And cool cooking is just one of the reasons. See your electric dealer real soon and get the whole wonderful story.

Over the back seat peered two beady black eyes, which we discovered were owned by a toy fox terrier who sat close beside his mistress while she made her rounds. Attached to the dashboard was a series of small trays secured by little suction cups containing all the feminine paraphernalia a woman usually carries in her purse and then some - cosmetics, scissors, comb, bobby pins, etc., and a stack of magazines were on the seat. She probably had her mending in a basket under the seat. You won't find a woman with time on her hands, even in the taxi business, who can't find plenty of things to do beside just sittin' and dreamin'.

Hears of a cabote in New York who contradicted the idea that they were all rough and tough. He asked a magazine editor who entered his cab on a hot day, "How would you like a cup of iced tea with mint?" Then he reached down on the floor beside him and brought up a paper cup filled with tea from a jug sitting in a pail of ice. There's a cab driver that deserved a tip!

After a few experiences of arriving home too late to thaw out that pre-cooked dinner that the emancipated housewife forgot to go to a meeting, someone will take out of the freezer before she probably come up with a new electrical invention that will open the freezer, remove what is in the top tray and thaw it out just in time to pop in the heating oven before dinner.
