Mrs. Paulett Wins Sweepstake Prize In Flower Show

With games and gaiety the main attraction during the three nights of the Firemen's Bazaar last week, the daytime highlight of the annual affair was the flower show, "September Magic" held by the Fairhaven Garden Club.

Because of the many artistic arrangements and specimens from local gardens, judging was difficult and the exhibit received compliments from all who saw it. Several people were heard to observe that some of the entries could have won a prize at a much larger show. Particularly attractive were the Dahlias, used in many arrangements.

Mrs. W. F. Paulett walked away with highest honors, winning the sweepstakes prize with seven blue ribbons, one red and one yellow ribbon. Robert Taylor was sweepstakes winner in the Junior Gardener Club show, winning first prize for the best marigold, zinnia, and a second and third prize for arrangements.

Mrs. C. W. Nees is president of the club, and Mrs. Charles Stone was Flower Show Chairman.

Ramblings

A columnist recently wrote a double column on the subject of women making better companions than men. Of course that depends on what he means by companions. I can't think of any woman so versatile that a man would prefer her company while out hunting and fishing and still find her a boon companion when in a mood for social life because women, unlike men, that look good in field and stream, rarely stand out on the dance floor. What he meant was that no man will listen to another man with rapt attention and hang on his every word, admiring both his words of wisdom and of confidence and also his necktie. He also meant that women are the best companions for men. Perhaps it works the same way the other way around. The obvious reason women listen so raptly to a man is that most of them have a lot more interesting things to say than women do. After a girl spends an afternoon over the bridge table or the teacups, who wouldn't enjoy listening to man? He shouldn't be so flattered. It's a relief to a woman to admire a man—the average woman won't give a member of her own sex the satisfaction of admiring much about her, not even her hat. Then he mentions loyalty—usually there's something more in it for her if a woman does all this writer says she does. Women don't send other women orchids, or buy them movie tickets, or steak dinners, or diamond rings. But maybe I'm being harsh—there are exceptions to every rule, and this is just a public way of arguing with a man I've never seen, so I can't argue with him. At least we won't fill up a whole column on the subject. If a woman is good to a man, he's probably worth it. And there are lots of good companions among the menfolks, too.

This is Christian Education week, which is being observed this year largely in connection with the publication of the Revised Standard Version of The Holy Bible. The observance consists of a service of thanksgiving and dedication of this new, more understandable Bible in 3,000 communities of English-speaking North America. It is doubtful whether anyone brought up on the King James Version will ever be able to unlearn certain passages and say them in simpler language. The rhythm of the words stays in mind. But the youngest generation will be able to read and learn what is in the Bible more easily. The New Testament, which was put on sale this week, has been given a new perspective by discoveries during the past 50 years of hundreds of Greek papyrus documents found in the sands of Egypt. It was 52 years ago that the American standard version came out. Since then it has been found that the New Testament was written in common, everyday language, and its present translators believe that the English translation should also be in such a language. The poetic parts of the Bible are written in poetic form, making them more easily discernible. It is hoped that with this version more people will become well acquainted with it, for there is much to learn in it from not only a religious standpoint, but from a historical, philosophical and literary one as well.

Cooks for 35 guests while away from home...

Mrs. Baron Cornett proves that electric cooking is amazingly automatic!

It happened when Mrs. Baron Cornett's sorority gave a "progressive dinner"... one of those affairs where you eat each course of the meal at a different home.

They're a lot of fun, progressive dinners, but often a bit hard on the hostesses. Especially when—like Mrs. Cornett—you draw the toughest job of all: the main course for thirty-five people!

Did Mrs. Cornett stay home in the kitchen and miss the fun of the first two courses herself? Not she!

"I placed the food in the oven," she says, "set the timer, went with the group on their first and second stops." When the party got to her house the food was all ready to serve!

An unusual demonstration of electric cooking's automatic features... of its trustworthy performance... its safety.

Of course, you may never go in for progressive dinners... but if you're a progressive homemaker you'll like the idea of having meals cook while you're shopping or visiting or doing housework. You'll like everything about electric cooking!

Feed Prices Too High . . . Farmers Take Action—Slash Southern States Prices!

Farmers are squeezed by feed prices that are too high in relation to prices received for meat, milk and eggs. The farmers who own and use Southern States Cooperative—272,000 strong—are doing something about it. Southern States Cooperative has made a sharp reduction in its mixed feed prices—is pricing them at less than actual cost. Southern States Service Agencies, working hand in hand with the farmers they serve, have reduced their handling margins to approximate actual cost. The result is a reduction of $4.00 to $5.00 per ton (20 to 25 cents per bag) in Southern States feeds which were already low in price as compared with commercial feed of comparable quality. This program of self-help by farmers will continue until it forces the price of commercial formula feeds to a more reasonable level from the standpoint of farmers. A big crop of corn and other feed grains will soon be pressing on the market. This also should help. Support this cooperative effort to pull down the too high price level on mixed feeds—save real money too by using quality feeds cooperatively manufactured by farmers in their own mills. See us for details. You'll be amazed at the new low Southern States feed prices.

Employ The Physically Handicapped Week

The important points in the current campaign to secure a fair deal for the physically handicapped are those which should have been made familiar through this annual observance. Employers are asked to think in terms of the abilities rather than the disabilities of those who have recognized impairments. No one maintains that any handicapped individual can fill any job, any more than any other individual can fill any job, but the important point is that the impairment in itself does not make the impaired person a poorer worker.

The topic calls for careful consideration rather than sentimentality. Proper placement is an essential feature, and studies made by the Department of Labor, Veterans' Administration, the Civil Service Commission, the National Association of Manufacturers, and other agencies show that when proper placement has been made, the handicapped worker's performance is as good or better than that of the unimpaired worker. Because of the difficulty which they have in finding jobs, these workers, it is generally accepted, are steadier than others. Statistical studies prove they are as efficient and have good safety records.

All of these things are regularly publicized to combat an unreasonable prejudice, and the need is for employers to act upon the logic of the appeal and not merely reflect upon it. Aside from any natural prejudice, there is another which can be traced to unsatisfactory experience, but the explanation there is usually lack of attention to proper placement. Present conditions are favorable to the purposes of the effort, and though this may be temporary, increased experience with employing the handicapped leaves a residue of good permanent results.

Country Lawyer

By Walter Johnson
In the possible event that we are to this year elect a stronger and more able Congress and one devoted more to protection of our system that new Congress might well take a good look at and into the Civil Service Commission. It would appear that letting sunlight into some of the darker corners of that bureau would be in the best interest of all of us.
That Commission was created in 1883 "to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States." It was given very great powers by the Congress to make rules having the force and effect of law governing the recruiting and the working conditions of the employees of the Executive Branch of our federal government. It operates under what it claims to be "the merit system" and which is a nice-sounding phrase but, of course, all measure of merit and what constitutes merit is determined by it.
The Commission has three members and under the law not more than two of them may be of one political party. As these Commissioners are appointed through nomination by the President subject to advice and consent of the Senate the non-democrat member is and always has been, since 1933, one carefully selected as being expected to go along generally with the other two and not speak out of turn.

At this time the Chairman of that Commission is the Honorable Robert Ramspeck of Georgia. For many months this gentleman has been speaking before various conventions and public gatherings and always denouncing the proposition of public discussion of public employees in any other than terms of blind adoration. The Commission, like other government agencies, has a quite large publicity staff of writers whose pens can be bought and who, at the drop of the hat, can always swing in to mend any holes in the public relations fence.
In recent years this Commission has, purportedly, been engaged in weeding out any Communists there may be in government. It has a very elaborate set-up for investigations and hearings for determination of who is and who is not a communist. It handles that type of individual with great tenderness and goes to great pains to refrain from hurting their feelings. It seems to actually strive to cut the very fine line between the actual card carrying communist on the one hand and the fellow who is so close to communism as to be classed as a fellow traveler or parlor pink.

But no such tenderness attaches to the treatment given to others who may be completely separated from any tinge of communism or leftism. It seems that the Commission gestapo is constantly on the go prying into the private lives of federal employees and carrying on what might properly be called a system of terrorism. An employee may, at any time, be called to account for acts and conduct wholly apart and aside from his employment.

Only recently this writer observed a letter received from the Civil Service Commission by a federal employee wherein that employee was fired. This letter recited his wrongdoings all of which were determined from investigations and none as the result of any hearing.

This letter recited that the employee had lied in his application for employment. He had stated therein that he had never been arrested. Actually he had been arrested but not convicted. That, according to the Commission, was a serious violation even though most people arrested but not convicted consider that to be a nullity. And, furthermore, the Commission had, by investigation, determined that the employee does, upon occasion, consume more beer than the Commission thinks he should. And the Commission had also determined that the employee had been known to have associated with a married woman.

But nowhere in that letter was there one iota of criticism of his performance of duty. He was fired wholly on the basis of what the Commission had, without hearing, determined to be wrongdoing in his private life apart and aside from his employment.

Congress might well look into the Commission conduct. It might well find out why the tender treatment given the fellow-traveler type compared with the determined firing of the fellow who might make the mistake of taking a little too much beer on a Saturday night.

Club Elects Officers

During the Hatton-Warren Home Demonstration Club meeting held with Mrs. Clarence Whitted Thursday, the following officers were elected: Mrs. Amy Steger, president; Mrs. Luther Baber, Jr., vice-president; and Mrs. C. M. Tucker, secretary-treasurer.

The topic of the meeting was frozen foods and party icebox cake demonstrated by Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Tucker.

Meanderer

We are writing this as we finish our coffee the morning of the last day in September. The month apparently wants us all to remember how beautiful September can be, for we are outdoors on the porch enjoying the fresh morning air and sunshine. A few birds are calling, the Bluejays, Titmice, Chickadees, and Carolina Wrens. If we were afraid the Robins weren't going to come for the dogwood berries, we no longer are wondering, for several mornings ago they came and along with them some of the other Thrush family. They are not at all economical with their food supply; if they happen to miss a berry, and it falls to the ground, they simply try another and let fall what falls. The air is by no means void of sound, for the din of many insects creates a continuous buzz. The green of summer is still around us, save for the dogwoods and the gums and some of the tulip poplars. Their lovely colors are being added to daily and soon the countryside will be ablaze.

We had been looking for Cedar Waxwings, and the other day saw quite a flock of them. On our short ramble we also saw a number of Bluebirds, a Pine Warbler chewing at a caterpillar almost as big as he was, one or two Myrtle Warblers, and a mature Red-headed Woodpecker. Flickers were common on the route that we took and so were Cardinals and Crows. We caught sight of a Redstart and a Sap Sucker in the woods, and heard the Meadow Larks calling from the fields, the same full call it gives in the spring. On the lake we found two pair of Grebe, diving for food, and then reappearing some distance away from their diving place. We also caught sight of some swimming animal, the first we ever remember seeing on the lake. Probably it was a muskrat, but we don't know.

We mentioned somewhat earlier about the new book in the Peterson Field Guide Stories. We have the Field Guide to the Mammals now, and although it will not prove to be as useful to us as the Field Guide to the Birds, simply because we do not see as many mammals as birds, still it is a beautifully-done little volume. The colored illustrations, and the points of difference among the various species, give the reader a great deal to go on.

It is later in the day now, and although we hear no birds, the insect chorus goes on louder than ever. It is the only sound we hear in the otherwise hushed surroundings. The moon shines brightly, and the air has a soft, mellow feel to it. This summer's last fling. The day will be good to remember, come winter's stormy blast.

Engagement Announced

The wedding reception will be held in the social room of the church immediately after the ceremony.

Electric Power Co.

Chiffon pie is the perfect dessert for a company meal. It's pretty, it looks special, and it's light and fluffy enough to follow a hearty dinner.

The General Electric Consumers Institute suggests making chiffon pie well in advance of a dinner party and freezing it in the food freezer. The afternoon of the party take the pie out of the freezer and let it thaw on a rack at room temperature for 1 to 1 1/4 hours. Topped with whipped cream, it will please your guests—and you, too.

Pour mixture into baked pie shell and spread evenly. Chill in refrigerator until firm (about 1 hour). Just before serving, spread whipped cream over filling.

Notes On Freezing

To Freeze: Chill until filling is firm, but do not spread whipped cream over filling. Wrap in moisture-vaporproof material, label and place in food freezer.

To Thaw and Serve: Thaw pie on rack at room temperature (70-75 degrees F.) for 1 to 1 1/4 hours. Filling may stick slightly to wrapping during thawing, but whipped cream spread over pie just before serving will cover objectionable appearance. If cream is not used, wrapping may be removed when pie is partially thawed to prevent sticking.

Although whipped cream freezes well, it should not be put on the pie before the pie is frozen as it takes longer to thaw than the chiffon filling.
