Tobacco Marketing Groups Report Savings

The Sun-Cured Tobacco Marketing Association announces savings of over $13,000 from the sale of the 1951 crop. The money has been credited to individual member accounts. On this basis a three-year revolving fund can be operated and all indebtedness except to members paid off by 1954.

The Sun-Cured Association also has enlarged its Richmond warehouse by about a third. This will give more floor space, and make holding, packing and office space available to buyers. Sometimes during the marketing of the 1952 crop members were unable to market their tobacco on the Association floors because of inadequate floor space. However, returns to growers were above average per pound for all warehouses selling sun-cured leaf.

Grass-Legume Mixtures

Alfalfa or red clover added to orchard grass-ladino clover mixture will give higher yields than the grass-ladino alone.

Agronomists suggest using a mixture of 10 pounds of alfalfa, 1 pound of ladino clover, and 7 pounds of orchard grass; or a mixture of 3 pounds of red clover, 1 pound of ladino, and 7 pounds of orchard grass, for higher yields than a grass-ladino mixture.

During dry seasons alfalfa grass mixtures are much more productive than ladino clover-orchard grass mixtures. Also, adding orchard grass to alfalfa produces higher yields than alfalfa alone.

Alfalfa with orchard grass, or alfalfa with ladino clover and orchard grass can be managed much more intensively than farmers are accustomed to doing.

Yield and survival of alfalfa is as good with four cuttings as with three. The quality of hay is much better when cut more frequently.

Alfalfa does not need to go to the full bloom stage, or even to begin bloom stage for the spring cuttings; it may be cut in the spring whenever the yield is enough to justify cutting. Blooming may therefore be largely ignored.

Slaughter Grass Fat Cattle Now for Home Use

Farmers who expect to get their own beef supply from grass-fat cattle should slaughter them now. Cattle should be gaining weight, not losing, at the time of slaughter. Once beef animals lose the fat they have gained off grass, it takes several months of expensive grain feeding to put it back.

Cattle of beef breeding can be expected to produce better quality meat than those of mixed or dairy breeding. Calves of dairy breeding make good veal, and calves of mixed dairy beef breeding make good slaughter calves as long as they retain their milk fat. Older cattle for home slaughter should be of definite beef breeding.

Young cattle, as a rule, produce more tender meat than older cattle, although the meat from those with more age is likely to have a better flavor. Heifers are satisfactory for the home meat supply. They fatten when young more readily than steers and usually have less market value.

In the past farmers had to wait for cold weather to get carcasses properly chilled after slaughtering. Now, however, there are facilities available for slaughtering, chilling, and freezing meat.

Fall Planting of Strawberries Mostly Impractical in Virginia

Fall planting of strawberries is not practical for most areas of Virginia.

The main reason for fall plantings in the northern half of the United States is that they get the plants into the ground where they will be set to start early spring growth. This can be an advantage in areas where spring is usually wet and planting dates are late.

If fall planting has any advantage...

Scottsville High FHA "Rats" Initiated

Just imagine this, sixteen high school girls in the Sophomore and Junior classes of the Scottsville High School, and not a word spoken. "Speech is silver, but silence is gold." Gold reigned supreme.

Who would have thought the glamorous and vivacious young ladies would be seen on the school campus dressed in dungarees with loud patches on their knees, shoes and socks that did not match, books being carried in a guano sack, hair worn in "pony tails", rouge spots on their cheeks and wearing their fathers or brothers discarded hats?

In addition to this, dark sun glasses hid their eyes. Around her neck each girl wore a colored ribbon to which was attached a bright colored spool of thread.

What was the occasion? Upon investigating we found that these girls were candidates for the Scottsville High School Chapter of the Future Homemakers of America. October 2, was their initiation day. In addition to the "silent treatment", through which they could not speak to any of the male species, and also wearing the above mentioned clothes, the girls had to tell a fish story to any teacher that asked them a question in class.

After school the formal ritualistic initiation took place and the sixteen "Rats" became full fledged members of the F.H.A.

Scottsville High School has had an F. H. A. chapter for the past five years.

Sun's First Birthday

The Scottsville Sun passed its first birthday last Sunday in strong contrast to the same day one year ago when the press was working overtime to get out the first issue.

On October 5, 1951, the owner and editor, J. B. McDearmon, presented the first copy to Scottsville's mayor, Dr. Percy Harris.

Since then the residents of this corner of Albemarle County, a great many in Fluvanna County and more than 100 friends and relatives far away from here are reading what the folks around here are doing.

The staff of the Sun wishes to thank all our readers for their enthusiastic reception of the paper, their contributions and cooperation. Special thanks is due to the merchants who have regularly contributed ads, thereby making it possible for us to continue into the second year of publication with hopes for a bigger, better paper.

Rape Case Trial Set For October 24

Walter James Woodson, 35-year-old Richmond Negro, will go on trial October 24 for the felonious assault and attempted rape of a 46-year-old, unmarried Fluvanna white woman.

Woodson was scheduled to be tried September 19, but the Richmond law firm of Smith and Smith, believed by the court to have been retained by Woodson, refused to represent him. The lawyers claimed that proper fees had not been paid.

Judge Edward Meeks, of Amherst, who presides over the Fluvanna Circuit Court, gave the defendant until Sunday to obtain counsel. Walter Smith, Charlottesville attorney and a Richmond lawyer whose name was not available Monday morning will represent Woodson.

Woodson was arrested August 6 after the plaintiff told officers he assaulted her in her house, near Columbia, then dragged her into some nearby woods where he attempted to rape her.

Ramblings

It's time now to change the tune from "don't forget to register," to "don't forget to vote." As though anyone could with the radio, the newspapers and the neighbors talking of nothing else but.

If the attitude about getting ready for Christmas early continues the way its going, you won't be able to get through with the Christmas bills before the whole idea hits you again. I'm surprised to hear of so many people who have already gotten Christmas cards and wrappings. As for me, it would seem more inspiring to wait until after the first frost or even the first snowflake, and there's nothing like shopping in a Christmas crowd.

It is time, however, to think about making gifts and cards for Christmas; and taking that Christmas photograph of the children holding last year's stockings, or sitting on the front porch with the dog, or something. Attractive cards can be handmade, by cutting a shape of a bell or star or Christmas ball out with a stencil knife and mounting the picture in the empty space. There is nothing that makes a warmer greeting than a message printed or written by hand.

The three-minute long distance phone call, expected or unexpected, used to take top honors in putting a person at a loss for words. I can chat any time on the phone with somebody down the street, but there never seem to be words important enough to say to one's family when minutes are being counted at such a high rate of pay. Now it is becoming a popular fad to put your words, or songs, on records and tape recordings. If you put a quarter in a slot in a commercial booth at many public gathering places, such as railroad

This business of counting the birds as they pass by the moon has certainly received a lot of publicity in the papers. We don't know how many clippings we've seen. As for our part in it, countings were made here in the County on the nights of Oct. 2, 3, 4 and 5. The first night of the more or less full moon period, the birds, during about a 2 hour vigil from 9 to 11 o'clock, came almost one a minute. The next night they showed a tapering off, more coming during the first part of the watching. Saturday night there were no birds, and on Sunday night, watching from 9:30 to 10:30 there were no birds. It will be interesting to see what will come out of the combined reports of the more than 200 watching posts in the country.

A short ramble on Sunday afternoon yielded several pair of American Pipits, which we remember having only seen once before in this vicinity, although most probably they are here every year. They were on the edge of an alfalfa field, in fact on three different sides of it. On first glance they look like just another sparrow, but the bill is slender, unlike all sparrow bills, and we noticed the curious tail-wagging. Having dispensed with the idea they might be vireos, or Myrtle warblers, Pipit was what came into our mind. Upon checking when we got back, there was no question. The American Pipit is very buffy looking underneath and is sort of streaky, and when it flies the outer tail feathers are white. Watch for the bird. It breeds in the Arctic, and winters over a wide range from New Jersey and Ohio, south to the Gulf of Mexico.

The same afternoon we found an Ovenbird in the woods, which is a rather late date for them to still be here. Our woods are overflowing with thrush. Aside from the Robins, we have seen one Wood thrush in the past few days and what appear to be Gray-checked Thrushes. There is such a little difference between it and the Olive-backed that without a clearer look than we've had, we wouldn't definitely say Gray-checked. We have some nice lettuce in the garden which is just now ready to eat. There are a few radishes and some snaps we forgot about. The Chinese cabbage is big enough now, and the regular cabbage that was set out late may head up before too much frost comes. A few sorry tomatoes still are on the vines, and the peppers continue to grow. We'll have some turnip greens too one of these days and some broccoli.

Fewer words begin with X than any other letter.

Your Attorney-General Says:

Democrats For Ike

Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, Jr. has made it plain again that Virginia Democrats who vote the Republican presidential ticket on November 4 will maintain their good status in the Virginia Democratic Party and will therefore be permitted to vote in the 1953 gubernatorial primary.

This reassurance will hearten many a Virginia Democrat who wants to continue as a member in good standing of the Democratic Party in this State, but who now intends to work and vote for the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket because he is thoroughly disgusted with the corruption, waste, extravagance and high taxes of the Fair Dealers.

This question has appeared several times on the Virginia political horizon since 1929, when it was first raised. Whenever an official ruling has been requested, the Attorney General then in office has reaffirmed the original opinion on the subject expressed in 1929 by the late Attorney General John R. Saunders. He ruled that Virginia Democrats who voted for Hoover in 1928 could vote in the August gubernatorial primary of 1929.

The issue arises because of the Democratic Party Pledge. That promise is in the Party Plan and is also a part of Chapter 15, Section 228 of the Virginia Code. That section of the Code sets forth the qualifications of voters in primary elections and provides, in part, that

No person shall be permitted to vote for the candidates of any party in any primary unless such person is a member of such party and in the last preceding general election, in which such person participated, he or she voted for the nominees of such party"

It would appear from this pledge that a Democrat who votes for the Republican presidential ticket would lose his right to vote in subsequent Democratic primaries in Virginia. However, such is plainly not the case, in the opinion of Saunders.

Saunders' opinion quoted parts of Chapter 15 (Sections 222 and 226) of the Code, which he construed to mean that presidential electors are not "nominees of the party." Therefore, concluded Saunders, the pledge is not applicable to presidential elections, because the voter is voting for electors who are not "nominees of the party." Almond, in his ruling, said Saunders' opinion also relieved Democratic candidates from the pledge in the same way that it relieved Democratic voters.

Almond called further attention to the fact that since Saunders' opinion of 1929, which has been reaffirmed by other Attorney Generals since that time, there have been sessions of the General Assembly of Virginia as well as conventions of the Democratic Party of Virginia. Although each of these bodies has authority to change the election and party laws as construed in this opinion, there have been no such changes, Almond reported.

"I felt that it would be safe to say that the opinion has become the law and the policy of the Commonwealth of Virginia and the Democratic Party," Almond ruled.

As this issue has been raised several times since 1929, Almond's opinion, as stated in the above paragraph should serve now to settle the question and to spur many Virginia Democrats to greater work and activity on behalf of the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

Household Hints

Even if they're not regular bread eaters, your family will like muffins made from these General Electric Consumer's Institute recipes.

Easy to mix in a jiffy, they can be frozen if you like. And you'll be surprised at how fast they disappear, once they're on the table.

Corn Meal Muffins

- 1 egg, unbeaten
- 1 cup milk
- 1/4 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 cup yellow corn meal
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Place egg, milk and melted shortening in medium-sized mixing bowl. Beat with a kitchen fork until thoroughly blended (about 100 strokes).

Sift flour, cornmeal, sugar, baking powder and salt together over surface of liquid ingredients. Using gentle strokes, carefully mix until ingredients are just blended (about 25 strokes).

Bake in greased 2 1/2 X 1 1/4 inch muffin pans at 425 degrees F. for 20-25 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

Date Cheese Muffins

- 1 egg, unbeaten
- 1 cup milk
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 cup melted shortening
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup grated American cheese
- 1/4 cup chopped dates

Place egg, milk and melted shortening into medium-sized mixing bowl. Beat with a kitchen fork until thoroughly blended (about 100 strokes).

Sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt evenly over surface of liquid ingredients. Add cheese and dates. Using gentle strokes, carefully mix until ingredients are just blended (about 25 strokes).

Bake in greased 2 1/2 X 1 1/4 inch muffin pans at 425 degrees F. for 20-25 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

Make the most of cake mixes. With all the wonderful new packaged cake mixes on the market, it's a rare homemaker who goes to the trouble of whipping up her own cake batter any more.

And you really can get delicious results with a packaged mix if you follow the mix manufacturer's instructions carefully — especially where mixing time is concerned!

Many failures with cake mixes are caused by undermixing. And that's easy to understand — with all prepared mixes requiring at least 4-5 minutes of concentrated beating for success. Even timing the strokes in hand-mixing is not fool-proof, but with an electric mixer you can mix at the same speed to the same consistency every time — with no damage to your good right arm in the process.

Following directions is especially important with packaged mixes because each brand differs in its recommendations in mixing time, oven temperature and pan size. Read the instructions in every box before you begin.

Use Mixer at Low Speed

When you use an electric mixer with a packaged cake mix, use the mixer at low speed for the best results.

And here are two suggestions for using "package mix" cakes as the basis for easy-to-make desserts:

Shortcake

Use a plain cake mix. Prepare cake, with the help of an electric mixer, as directed on the cake mix package. After baking, split layers and use as bases for peach or strawberry shortcake.

Upside-down Cake

Melt 1-3 cup butter in a 9 X 9 X 2 inch square pan. Sprinkle 1/2 cup brown sugar evenly over butter. Arrange drained cooked fruit (pineapple, apricots, peaches, prunes or cranberries) in an interesting design in sugar mixture. Mix one package of any plain cake mix, using your electric mixer at low speed. Pour batter carefully over fruit, and bake according to cake mix directions for square or loaf cake. Invert immediately on serving plate, allow to cool slightly, remove pan. Serve warm.

Farm Notes

age in this part of Virginia, here are a few things to remember:

Fall set plants must be well mulched to prevent heaving from freezing and thawing of the soil. Apply several inches of mulch before the first long hard freeze of winter is expected.

Plants set in the fall will not make a crop the following spring. Strawberries set their fruit buds in late fall. These plants would bear some fruit the following spring, but seldom have enough root growth to support the strain of fruiting. Treat fall set plants the same as spring set plants. Remove the blossoms and do not let the plants bear until the following spring.

Maintain enough moisture. Plants set in the fall often suffer a higher loss than plants set in the spring because of not enough moisture.
