Local Firemen Endorse Proposal For County Truck

The Scottsville Volunteer Fire Department gave an endorsement on Monday night to the proposal by Supervisor John W. Williams for additional fire protection in the county.

The local Fire Department expressed its unanimous approval and passed a resolution stating "the Scottsville Volunteer Fire Department supports the proposal to the Albemarle Board of Supervisors to purchase fire equipment and employ trained personnel as suggested by Supervisor John W. Williams." A second resolution was also passed at Monday night's meeting asking that the Scottsville Fire Department have a voice in the type of equipment selected.

Williams' proposal for additional fire protection in the county has met with some opposition from county residents who feel that the county as a whole would not benefit equally. The Albemarle Board of Supervisors held a called meeting last night at the county courthouse in Charlottesville to discuss Williams' proposal and the various aspects of the need for additional fire protection in the county. The Scottsville Fire Department sent representatives to this meeting to voice the Department's approval of the recommendation by Williams.

At the present time there are two volunteer fire companies in Albemarle County. One is the Scottsville organization and the other is at Crozet. The Charlottesville Fire Department has been answering county calls on a limited basis. The city manager or mayor of Charlottesville now has to give permission for the Charlottesville Fire Department to answer a county call, which brings about a delay in answering the county call. If Williams' plan goes through the Charlottesville Fire Department will no longer have to get permission to answer a county call.

Williams, Chairman of the Supervisor's committee on fire protection, has asked the county to purchase a fire truck which will be stationed at the Charlottesville Fire House. Two full time firemen will be employed and the truck will operate in cooperation with the Charlottesville Fire Department in providing fire protection for the county and will be available for the city when needed.

The Williams plan asks for an initial expenditure by the county of approximately $13,000, of which $11,500 is listed for the cost of the fire truck and $1,500 for the garage to house it. Expenses for the operation of the truck will run about $6,000 a year. Salaries for the two full time employees will take an estimated $5200 of this amount and truck maintenance and insurance will run $800 a year. Williams has stated that his plan will not require additional taxes, as the cost can be absorbed in the present county budget.

Supervisor Williams and Supervisor Ashby Harris, representative from the Scottsville District, met with the Scottsville Fire Department on Friday night, January 2. At this meeting Williams explained his proposal to the Department members and at the following Monday night meeting they gave it their endorsement. Mr. Harris has not yet stated publicly his approval or disapproval of the Williams proposal.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Rinker of Alexandria announce the birth of a son, David Lee, on January 1 at 2:30 a.m. David weighed 8 pounds. His mother is the former Miss Katherine Goodwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Goodwin of Scottsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Cohen Milton Cohens Too Busy For Hobbies; But Take Lively Interest In Community

By Elizabeth Wimer
Like many another young couple in business, Mr. and Mrs. Milton M. Cohen of Scottsville are too busy to indulge in hobbies or spare-time projects. When asked what, if any, their hobbies and pastimes were, they leaned against the counter of their store, The Hub, and laughed as they replied that there were lots of things they'd like to do, but, they said, "We don't have time."

Running Scottsville's only family clothing store is a full-time job for both of them. "We bought a set of tennis racquets once," said Mrs. Cohen, "but we only used them twice."

"I'd like to keep up with the photography I learned in the Army," said Mr. Cohen, "but I don't have time."

They both would enjoy golf, and manage to read as much as possible. When they are not at the store six days a week, their time is spent in their home here with their daughters, Lynn, aged three-and-a-half, and Susan, 27 months. During the buying seasons, they make a trip to New York where a good deal of their time is spent in the clothing market.

The Cohens take a lively interest in community projects and civic affairs. Mr. Cohen is a member of the Scottsville Lions Club, the Scottsville Masonic Lodge 45 A.F. and A. M., of which he is a past master, the Beth Israel Temple in Charlottesville and the Scottsville V. F. W.

Born in Lynchburg, Mr. Cohen attended grade school there, and then came to Scottsville 22 years ago. After his graduation from Scottsville High School, he went to work in New York for two years, but confesses he likes Virginia better. He was next employed in Alexandria, then made his way back to Charlottesville and then to Lynchburg.

He had moved to Washington, D. C. when he entered the U. S. Army Air Force after the start of World War II. Three and one-half years of service included 33 months overseas in Europe and Africa as a photographer. It is from his training in this field that his interest has grown in amateur photography.

Mrs. Cohen, who met her husband in Washington, is the former Miss Rose Mae Oseroff of Baltimore, Md.

After staying in Washington a short while after his discharge from the Air Force, Mr. Cohen and his wife returned to Scottsville to enter the clothing business with his father, who owned and operated The Hub for 20 years. Now he is following in his father's footsteps, providing for the people of Scottsville a convenient place to shop and taking part, as much as time allows, in community affairs.

Fork Union WMS Invites Prospective Members To Tea

The Women's Missionary Society of the Fork Union Baptist Church is inviting prospective members to a devotional service and tea at the church next Wednesday at 1:45 p.m.

The second Wednesday of each month has been designated as Church Day for all women of the Fork Union Baptist Church. At next Wednesday's meeting women in the community who may become members of the Baptist Women's Circles are invited as special guests.

Mrs. Louise Crockett will lead the devotional service. Special music will be given by Mrs. Irving Howell, who will sing a solo. Rev. H. W. Connelly, pastor of the church, will deliver a message. Also on the program will be reports from the recent Women's Missionary Union Clinic of the Albemarle Association which was held at the First Baptist Church in Charlottesville.

Tea will be served in the Educational Building adjoining the church. A fellowship hour will follow.

Mrs. Walter Connelly, wife of the pastor, is president of the Women's Missionary Society. The social committee in charge of the tea is composed of Mrs. E. B. Weaver, Mrs. J. Willis Norvell, and Mrs. W. J. Smith.

Mrs. Browning Heads Farm Bureau Group

At the December meeting of the Fluvanna Farm Bureau Board of Directors the discussion centered around the need of greater participation by the women in Farm Bureau Activities. To attain this goal Mrs. E. C. Browning was named as chairman of the Ladies Work. This office will give Mrs. Browning a voting seat on the Board of Directors.

As head of the women's work, Mrs. Browning will seek to represent county Farm Bureau Women at state and district levels. She will correlate all women's activities in the county work, will assist the Farm Bureau president, and will aid with making assignments.

Kent Loving, the new president of Fluvanna Farm Bureau, appointed the following standing committees for work in 1953: Resolutions, George Forysthe; Legislative, W. A. Forstbauer; Publicity, Mary Alice Ankers; Program, Howard Black; Service, Ernest Morris.

Other officers of the local group are Howard Black, vice-president; and secretary-treasurer, Harry Shepherd.

County residents who are interested in promoting agricultural and rural welfare are urged by Mr. Loving to join the Farm Bureau. Particular stress is placed on blending efforts by families in the work of the Fluvanna Farm Bureau. The organization gives the farmers a chance to make known individual and collective desires in a most democratic way.

Patrons in favor of sending their children to an improved Scottsville High School won out by a majority of 25 votes over those wishing to send their children to the Albemarle County consolidated high school when results of the ballots sent out last week by the county school board were announced at the board meeting this afternoon. The vote was 132 to 107, with four votes disqualified because they were not signed when sent in.

The four votes were hotly contested, since the Scottsville delegation which appeared today and at the last board meeting declared they should not be counted, and the school board was inclined to count them. When the ballots came into the office of Paul Cale, county school supervisor, they were returned for signatures, and sent back to the office. After the decision was made to throw them out, on the request of the Scottsville group, which favors attendance at Scottsville High School, Jack B. Taylor asked which side they favored. The votes had been in favor of the local school, he was informed.

Members of the delegation from here, headed by Hugh Flynn, also took exception to the manner in which the ballots had been counted. They felt that the votes should have been opened collectively immediately before the meeting, rather than being counted as they came in during the week. They were opened and counted each day at the superintendent's office.

The delegation also objected to Mr. Cale's having had any part in the phrasing of a letter sent out by the Esmont group which favored attendance at the consolidated school. W. P. Heath, chairman for this group, drew up the letter, urging patrons to vote so that students from the Scottsville district could have transportation to the consolidated school. The letter, which went out the same day as the ballots, was submitted to Mr. Cale first, and he is reported to have made some changes and corrections in it. The Esmont faction was not present at today's meeting.

Professor E. J. Oglesby, school board member, voiced objection to the insinuations made that the school board and Mr. Cale had not been fair in handling the balloting.

A member of the Scottsville delegation stated that he wished that they could take back what had been said, but he felt that they could not.

The school board was still in session at 10:30 tonight, with no report of a definite decision as to where high school students from the Scottsville district will go to school next year. Members of the Scottsville delegation returned here at 5:30 p.m. after being present since 1:30 when the meeting opened. They were under the impression that decision would not be made until a future date.

Household Hints

By Nada Mays, Home Economist
Appalachian Electric Power Co.

A good way to start the New Year is by planning and serving better, nutritious, and attractive meals.

Even though the pattern for an adequate diet is constantly before us, we sometimes forget to follow it as we should. To refresh our memories, let's go over it.

Meats—should be served one or more times during the day. Meat furnishes protein, iron, phosphorus, thiamine, riboflavin, and niacin to our bodies.

Milk—1 pint for adults; 1 quart for children daily. Milk furnishes protein, calcium, phosphorus, vitamin A, thiamine, and riboflavin.

Eggs—should be served 3 or 4 times a week. Eggs are important for the iron they furnish our bodies.

Potatoes—Should be served once every day.

Vegetables (fresh, canned and dried) should be served twice a day. Green or yellow vegetables should be served often. Dried legume (beans, peas, etc.) are included.

Fruits (fresh or canned) should be served twice a day. Citrus fruit or tomato juice should be served often.

Bread or cereals and butter should be served each day.

Minerals and vitamins are easily destroyed by improper storage and preparation. Baking, steaming, and pan-frying (cooking in small amount of fat) conserve minerals. The solubility of minerals increases at higher temperatures. The shorter the cooking period the more minerals will be retained. They are concentrated near the skin so foods such as potatoes should be cooked in the skin.

The outer leaves of lettuce, beet and turnip tops are very high in minerals and should be eaten rather than thrown away.

Vitamins are highly perishable and should be guarded carefully. Vitamin C or ascorbic acid is the most perishable of the vitamins. Loss is very rapid when exposed to air so cut fruit should not be left any length of time. To conserve while cooking, cook quickly in a small amount of water and in a covered container. Serve at once.

Thiamine or B1 is the next most perishable vitamin. It should be stored so as to prevent loss of moisture and should be kept cool. Thiamine is very soluble in water and should be cooked in as little water as possible (only steamed) in a covered container.

Riboflavin or B2 is not as soluble in water or as easily destroyed by heat as C and B1, but is easily destroyed by sunlight. Milk, so very rich in riboflavin, should never be left on the porch in the sunlight because the vitamin B2 will be destroyed.

Other vitamins are not as easily destroyed as these three but should be carefully watched.

How attractively the food is served is almost as important as the serving of nutritious food. If food is not appealing and stimulating to the appetite, it will seldom be eaten. Serve immaculately with a lot of color, garnishing, pleasing texture — hot food, hot, and cold, food, cold.

Even though this is only a small bit of nutrition to be brought to mind in serving better meals, more information should be sought and followed.

It will be well worth the effort to strive to serve better meals, that is, meals that promote health and happiness, this year than ever before.

1-2 Million Pine Seedlings Sold By Forest Service

The Charlottesville Virginia Forest Service District Office reports nearly one-half of the million trees of their allotment have been sold for the spring planting season ending April 1st, 1953.

The Forest Service states that planting can be profitable if carried out on areas such as the following:

1. On idle or abandoned fields which are more suitable for trees than for crops or pastures.
2. On areas desired for tree growth that are not naturally seeding in.
3. On former pine areas where undesirable hardwoods are predominating.

4. As underplanting of natural open stands, such as woodlands that have large openings.

5. On areas to control erosion, to provide windbreaks for farm buildings.

6. When shelter planting for game or livestock are desired.

Tree seedlings can be planted by hand or with a mechanical tree planter that the Forest Service has for renting to persons planting 8,000 or more trees. By hand planting, 500 to 800 can be planted per man day. The planting machine is capable of planting as many as 8,000 to 10,000 per day. When the trees are spaced 6 1/2 feet apart, it requires 1,000 trees to plant an acre.

Is The Handout Era Ending?

In mid-December an Associated Press dispatch from Washington said, "The new Congress . . . appeared primed to join with great gusto in President-elect Eisenhower's promised drive to slash federal spending."

"Republicans and Democrats alike . . . voiced overwhelming sentiment for budget cuts ranging from $5 billion to more than $20 billion."

This is some of the best news that has come from the national capital in a very long time. It unquestionably reflects public opinion in this country today. All observers are certain that the President-elect gained a great many votes by his stand on federal spending and taxation. And most of the other winners, in both parties, emphasized economy and eventual tax reduction in their campaigns.

It looks as if we may be coming to the end of the handout era at last. It has been an era of incredible waste of our money—and, as is inevitable with spendthrift government, it has been an era of widespread corruption. One of the greatest and most necessary tasks confronting the Eisenhower government is to replace prodigality with thrift.

Country Lawyer

By Walter Johnson

Now, two months after election and just before General Eisenhower becomes our President, we can well take a look at that which we created by our votes on November 4, 1952. Being as generous as possible the best that can be said about it is that the new creation is, at this stage, disappointing. There are many reasons.

First of all the group with which the General has surrounded himself have full color of another brain trust such as wrought so much havoc under President Roosevelt. And the immediate group are so fully taken from the Dewey group as to give the new government color of Deweyism. It raises the fear that all we accomplished in the November election was to substitute Deweyism for Trumanism. Packing of the inner circle with Dewey cronies leaves us with government-by-crony.

Secondly, there is strong attack upon two-party government. Three new deal Democrats have already been selected for top place in this Republican government. These have been named to head Social Security, Labor and Navy branches of government. Two of these were selected from Texas as so-called "recognition" of the South.

Thirdly, there appears undue affinity for big business generally and for General Motors particularly. The head of General Motors will be Secretary of Defense and two Dealers of General Motors will be in other cabinet posts. Big business can be reasonably conservative from the standpoint of conserving our system but it likewise can be just as reactionary as the labor boss group. Public interest demands that we be left free of regimentation and direction for the advantage of either the big business group or the labor boss group.

Fourthly, the General appears to be ready to follow the path beaten by Roosevelt and followed by Truman of trying to direct the conduct of the Congress. Already he has named General Persons to act as his lord high lobbyist in Congress. He has summoned leaders of Congress into his presence to receive directions from him. Under the vitally important doctrine of separation of powers the Congress is we, the people, speaking through our chosen representatives. We cannot so speak if our Chief Executive presumes to interfere and direct what our representatives shall do. A Congress subservient to the President is no Congress. The President is no Congress. The President who presumes to direct the Congress is taking all the aspects of a dictator.

It may well be that better judgment will enter the picture and that the new administration will shake off some of the presently existing unhappy aspects. Most of us who believe in and want to retain our Freedom and Dignity as citizens and want to call a halt to those reactionary concepts that have eaten into our system during the past two decades will so hope.

On the other hand should it turn out that the "liberalism" that now seems to prevail around General Eisenhower continues and it prove out that the "liberals" have taken over the Republican as well as the Democrat party then something else must be done.

And it can be done. If the conservative elements of both major parties recognize that these parties have both gone "liberal" they can pull together into a new party. Normally it would be difficult to create and build a third party but this would not be truly a third party. Instead it would be the second party if it proves out that the incoming Republican administration follows the pattern of the outgoing Democrat administration and that there is no real distinguishing difference between that which we now call the two parties.

The best thing that General Eisenhower can do for himself and for his country is to reconsider his position. He should unpack his inner circle to where he may hear a few conservative voices too. In so doing he would permit many to regain a measure of confidence in him and in his administration.

WASHINGTON

YOUR SENATOR

A. WILLIS ROBERTSON

(Ed Note: With this week's issue we are pleased to announce that this column will be a regular feature of your county newspaper.)

The 83rd Congress convened on January 3rd in an atmosphere of hopefulness.

Those Democrats, including most of us from the South, who have long found ourselves at odds with Administration views on such matters as centralized government and excessive spending, hope to be able to work harmoniously with the Eisenhower Administration. Those who felt that the necessary reforms could be achieved under a new leader of the Democratic party and those who felt that the best solution was to reform this party by bringing about its defeat are, in my opinion, united now in wanting to give the new executive every reasonable opportunity to solve the pressing problems which face him.

We fully realize that not only the integrity of our economy but the very existence of our democratic form of government is at stake and that this is no time to play politics.

I am hoping that the same attitude will prevail in the Republican ranks and that this will overcome the tendencies toward international isolationism and protection of special interests which traditionally made the party unacceptable in the South.

The most immediately pressing problem which must be solved largely by the Congress is that of approaching a balanced budget. I say "approaching" because even the most optimistic economy advocates realize that the budget cannot be balanced immediately without postponing even the limited tax relief which the people of the nation have been led to expect.

Under the present laws half the existing profits tax will automatically be dropped next June and the remaining half will come off in June 1954. I opposed the imposition of this tax on even a temporary basis because it is an unscientific way to raise revenue and has a depressing effect on business. I believe the tax should be allowed to expire.

We must realize, however, that the ending of this tax will reduce revenue for the '54 fiscal year, starting next July, by $1,000,000,000 and for the following fiscal year another $1,500,000,000.

Before the end of fiscal '54 the emergency 10 percent tax on personal incomes in due to expire and that will mean another $700,000,000 drop in revenue. The following year certain excise taxes are due to expire and unless these are reimposed total revenue reduction will then be more than $8,000,000,000.

Our problem, then, is to find ways to cut spending to match these revenue reductions and to prevent further deficits such as the one for the current fiscal year which is expected to be in the neighborhood of $10,000,000,000.

I am happy to be back on the Senate Appropriations Committee for this session and to have a continuing opportunity to exercise the kind of economy which enabled us to cut an average of ten percent off the budget spending proposals in 1952.

Our task will be much easier, of course, if the executive branch of the government has made a genuine effort to cut the fat out of departmental requests before they are included in the budget and that, as I indicated at the start of this discussion, is what we are hopeful will happen this year.

Ramblings

The year is a week old, and by now some of those ambitious resolutions have been forgotten or broken. We hail the start of every year, and the wise will also hail the start of each new day, for it has been observed that life begins every day, not at any certain age or time.

Not many of us have time to keep a diary. And a diary is useless if it only records daily activities and engagements without thoughts and reactions to the day's events. In my annual desk-cleaning job, I find a lesson every year. We cannot forecast or plan what kind of days there are to come, but in reviewing various events and situations recorded by friends and relatives in letters, and at the end of the year, knowing the outcome, we are conscious of Lord Byron's observation, "Time! the corrector when our judgments err." What seemed momentous, disastrous, worrisome, or especially exciting eight or ten months ago, may now have changed and may not seem so important. Or it may have turned out for the best. A general resolution to keep faith in the future and in oneself sounds like an easy overall decision. But it is a hard one to keep, on looking back on the 365 days past. It has been said that fear of failure is failure. To strike a happy medium between fear and over-confidence is an ideal worth striving for. Then, like the center of a whirlpool, there will be a core of calm and strength around which the fortunes of any day or any year may swirl and toss with little damage to ourselves.

A fact of nature is that a spider never becomes entangled in its own web. Because he knows which thread of his web to walk on. Some are sticky, to catch other insects, some are not. Humans, being above spiders, should attempt to weave a web of life in which there are no sticky threads. In tricking someone else, they are likely not to be so fortunate as the spider.

If you watch the mountains on a clear, cold day, it is impossible to say that winter is a dull, drab season. This week snow covered the highest range of the Blue Ridge. Deep blue clouds hung above them, and as they passed on, the colors changed to white against a clear bright blue. Later in the day, the sun came out, making the snow almost glisten, even at a distance; the foothills were purple, and the fields near at hand were turned to deep yellow-gold. Now that the leaves are all gone, except in the green pine woods, white houses dot the landscape across the countryside that are seldom noticed in the summertime. Every season has a charm of its own!

The Meanderer

The best Christmas present we received was a book — Stalking Birds with Color Camera, by Arthur A. Allen, noted Professor of Ornithology at Cornell University. The book was brought out by the National Geographic Society, and includes 331 color pictures and 93 in black and white. The illustrations portray 266 North American species of birds in their natural habitats, and the pictures are accompanied by Allen's fascinating narrative of his studies and experiences.

The foreword by Gilbert Grosvenor, President of the National Geographic Society states "That public interest in birds and bird life justifies this tremendous labor often has been demonstrated. An example was the nation-wide publicity accorded Dr. Allen's discovery in June, 1948, of the nesting place of the bristle-thighed curlew in the Alaskan tundra". We were one of those fortunates who heard Dr. Allen in Lynchburg a couple of years ago, and saw the movies that were taken on his expedition to find this rare bird's nesting place. We are indeed proud and happy to have this wonderful book in our library.

We have had Purple Finches around our house all week. Dogwood berries, or what is left of them, seem to be the main attraction. The male Purple Finch is really not purple at all, but more of a raspberry color, while the female looks like a streaked sparrow of some sort. Their heavy finch bill gives them away, however. All the birds are frequenting the feeders more during the cold and uncertain weather we have been having. The Ruby-crowned Kinglets showed up a couple of weeks ago, and there have been as many as twelve different species around during the day. To watch Elkton, the birds at the feeders is an ever fascinating occupation, but the other day we were treated to an exceptional treat. There were four Blue Jays perched on the bird bath, and a Cardinal in a bush right beside them. It was an unforgettable picture.

"a Million more kilowatts for Me?"

No, Mrs. Elliott. We don't expect that you'll be needing a million more kilowatts for yourself.

But we do aim to make sure that you will always have as much electricity as you want. That is why your electric company, along with others in the American Gas and Electric Company System, is now installing generators that will increase the system's capacity by a million kilowatts.

You see, our territory is growing mighty fast these days—new factories, new homes and a lot more people. We have to see to it that there is enough electricity for all of these folks, and enough left over so we can invite other new industries to move in. This means better living for all of us.

Announcement has just been made of the new John Deere "40" Series General-Purpose Tractors which replace the "M" Series.

Headlining an impressive list of advances in the new models are: new heavy-duty three-point hitch for a new and completely modern line of Quik-Tatch working equipment, a new and advanced system of load and depth control through the time-proved John Deere Touch-o-matic system, and a more powerful two-cylinder engine that delivers approximately 15 per cent more power. One of the new models is on display at Jefferson Mills.

The new Model "40" Standard replaces the Model "M" in the John Deere line; the Model "40" Tricycle-Type replaces the Model "MT". They are rated as full two-pow tractors in most soils; furnish complete power for farms up to 100 acres, helper power for larger farms.

2 Deer, Turkey Killed

Two deer and one turkey have recently been checked in at the Scottsville Game Station as the hunting season draws to a close.

Willie Cook reported on Saturday a deer weighing 100 pounds and with six points. David Lee McGuire bagged the other deer, which weighed in at 150 pounds and had seven points.

A. T. Mundy checked in last week a turkey which weighed 8 pounds.

Pollard Staley, checker at the Game Station, reports that this year the amount of game listed at the Scottsville Station has been less than in previous years. The County Game Warden finds that the game killed throughout the county has been approximately the same as in past years. Outlying game stations near Scottsville have reported more game checked in, which may account for the Scottsville Station's light report.

Deer season closed on Monday. Hunting season will close on January 20.
