Fall In Elevator Changed Dr. King's Plans To Establish Practice In Another Vicinity

Falling down two stories with a run-away elevator usually marks the ending of a career but not so in the case of Scottsville's new Lions' Club president.

Dr. Robert Lee King, Jr., had been in Scottsville less than three months, with plans for practicing in another vicinity, when he fractured his ankle in a falling elevator in Charlottesville. It took nine months for the ankle to heal and what with trips to the hospital and all, Dr. King soon found himself a permanent resident of this community.

Born and raised along the Atlantic Ocean, Dr. King had originally planned to hang his shingle up somewhere near the sea. Now, however, he has become so fond of his adopted town that the lure of the salt water is a thing of the past.

The Doctor was born November 4, 1914 in Raleigh, North Carolina. He attended Maurice Hill Junior College in Maurice Hill, N. C. and then attended the University of North Carolina over at Chapel Hill. His dental training was undertaken at the Medical College of Virginia down at Richmond where he was graduated in 1941.

July 21, 1941, Dr. King came to Scottsville to work with Dr. J. A. Jones, local dentist, who's office now is just across the street from the Lion's Club exec. At this time the stay here was to be a short one, but the elevator fall on October 8, 1941, changed the Doctor's plans. Now he's one of Scottsville's staunchest boosters.

Previous to being elected president, Dr. King, a charter member of the Scottsville Lions' Club, formed May 25, 1942, held all three vice-presidential posts as well as serving a term as "Tail-Twister", a job which gave him authority to fine other members whenever they committed minor infraction of club rules.

Dr. King has been chairman of the Program Committee and of the Sight Conservation Committee. He has been associated with numerous other committees and during the past year, in his capacity as First Vice-President, he was overseer of approximately a half dozen of these committees.

Two major accomplishments of the Lions' Club since its forming ten years ago have been the opening of the United States Rubber Company Plant and the building of a Commercial Room at the high school. Dr. King played an important role in both of these.

Besides his Lions' Club activities, Dr. King is kept busy with his association with the Scottsville Volunteer Fire Department. Twice Vice-President of his organization, he is now in his fourth year as

New Dial Phone System Goes Into Effect In Area

This morning at 8 o'clock telephone users in Scottsville put aside their old style, long familiar phones and started using the now popular dial system to make their calls.

Gone is the central exchange in the town of Scottsville, the exchange that citizens here have known all their lives. Now instead of cranking to get the operator they have only to dial four numbers and the next voice they hear is from the place they are calling.

Scottsville has greeted this change with mixed emotions. For many it is a welcome innovation. Less rings on party lines and less elbow grease to make a call. Others mourn the passing of a system in which the personal touch enables callers to leave messages and divert calls thanks to the helpful assistance of the local operator.

Persons wanting to make long-distance calls now dial "0" and get an operator in Charlottesville. Operators at Charlottesville can dial directly any number called in a town which is also on the dial system. This means that Scottsville phone users can call New York and contact only one operator enroute.

In a letter, received by most telephone owners yesterday morning, M. L. Brown, district commercial manager, stated, "... Even though the telephone service is being converted to dial operation on July 10th (today) the new dial rates on local exchange service will not become effective until July 5th. Standard toll charges for calls between Scottsville subscribers and subscribers of the Charlottesville Exchange who live in the vicinity of Esmont will become effective on July 10. . . ."

New Dial Telephone Directories have been sent out to all telephone holders complete with the new numbers for this vicinity and also instructions on how to use the dial system. Another instruction pamphlet was included with the letter received yesterday.

Court News

Scottsville Trial Justice Court had a light pre-Fourth of July last Thursday with only three cases being heard by Judge Sydney Watson.

James Nathan Reed, Negro, was fined $100 plus costs and given a 30-day suspended sentence for driving while drunk.

Reed, a New Yorker whose father lives here near Scottsville, just finished a four-year cruise in

To Attend Boys State

Bobby Spencer, Scottsville High Junior, has been selected by the Lions Club to attend the annual Boys State at Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg. Young Spencer leaves this Sunday for a one-week stay. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kirk A. Spencer of Scottsville.

Event Cancelled

The "Coon on the Log" event scheduled to take place July 27 under the sponsorship of the Scottsville Lions Club for the benefit of the school band has been cancelled, it was reported today.

The event was reportedly called off because of opposition to holding it on the Sabbath.

Delegation Urges Children Be Sent To New School

A delegation of 15 people representing the communities of Esmont, Warren, Alberene, Hatton, Howardsville and Schuyler appeared this afternoon before the Albemarle County School Board to request that the board give permission and provide transportation for high school students in these communities, who now attend Scottsville high school, to attend the Albemarle County consolidated high school when it opens in the fall of 1953.

A petition signed by 175 residents from the above-mentioned area was presented to the board by the delegation, headed by E. C. Wingfield, Charlottesville attorney Spokesman for the group. Wingfield pointed out that they were not against Scottsville having its own high school, but they wanted the right to send their children to the best school in the county, which he termed as being the consolidated high school instead of the Scottsville High School.

Members of the board asked what others in these communities thought about the question, and C. E. Hamner of Esmont replied that "not one" person was against the petition when it was circulated.

Paul H. Cale, superintendent of Albemarle Schools, said that nothing as yet has been heard from the Carters Bridge and Woodbridge areas, but that a complete survey would have to be made.

J. T. Henley, school board chairman, told the delegates that no action could be taken at present, but the board would have Mr. Cale make a careful survey in order to determine who wants to go to which school. "We don't want to make anybody do anything they don't want to," Henley said.

The delegation stressed the fact that the Scottsville delegation that appeared before the board last month concerning improvements to the Scottsville school did not express the sympathies of the Scottsville district as a whole. The group today pointed out that the June graduating class of 23 members at Scottsville High School included only nine from Scottsville and 14 from the communities listed on the petition. It has been estimated by authorities that about 60 per cent of those attending Scottsville High School are from outside the town of Scottsville.

Scottsville Nine Downs Rubber Plant

Young Melvin Simpson's 13 strikeouts went for naught Sunday as Scottsville beat the U. S. Rubber Plant 6-4 in a Tri-County Baseball League game on the Scottsville High diamond.

Taking advantage of the Plant's miscues, the home team ran wild on the base paths to over balance Simpson's fine pitching performance. The youth pitcher gave 13 strikeouts, 11 walks and two

The Plant pounded out a total of 13 hits, including five consecutive singles by Jim Childress, first sacker, but left 11 runners stranded on the bases.

Playing heads up ball, Scottsville put together three stolen bases with a single hit in the third frame to score two runs. One of these came across when Simpson committed a balk. Billy Goodman, veteran Plant manager, stated that he was playing the game under protest from this point on the grounds that the second run should not have counted.

Scottsville scored another run on one hit in the fourth when Ranny Moulton blasted a towering triple to deep left field and then scored on a Plant error.

Two more runs came across on two hits in the fifth when Eddie Price slammed a base clearing double with two mates aboard to lock up the game. Price, who gave up 11 hits while striking out eight in five and two-thirds innings, was the winning pitcher.

Scottsville scored their final run in the eighth on another lone hit as "Red" Rittenhouse singled, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored moments later while a teammate was grounding out.

diamond dust . . . . .
Jim Childress sent his batting average soaring up to a fat.522 with his sensational five for five Sunday. We'd venture a guess that he's just about tops in the league right now "Red" Rittenhouse and Buck Douglas, Scottsville's top hitters both lost ground as they each only got one for four. Rittenhouse leads his team with a .455—still a mighty fine average. Simpson's 13 strikeouts makes a total of 44 in four outings. He's a young pitcher that the league should be seeing a lot more of in the future. The rhubarb that took place over the run scored on that balk in the third inning Sunday hinged on whether or not Hughes had reached third before the misplay occurred. Both teams think they're in the right. We were watching the steal home and missed that one. . . . .

Frank Fernyhough reached first on an error by Easton. Rhodes ground out short to first. Childress banged out a single. Harding singled scoring Fernyhough. Powell and Toney both struck out. One run, two hits, one error. Scottville:

Household Hints

By
Nada Mays, Home Economist
Appalachian Electric Power

A dessert is the dish that still makes the mouth water after already having a meal of tasteful basic foods. Desserts may be light or heavy, depending upon the type and/or size of the meal.

To add vitamins and mineral to the diet, make that ice cream into a delicious banana sundae:

1 ripe banana
1 ball or scrap of ice cream
2 tablespoons chocolate, or fruit syrup
2 tablespoons crushed fruit or preserves
Whipped cream
Nuts, whole or chopped cherries or blackberries

Use fully ripe banana — yellow peel-flecked with brown.

Peel and quarter banana by cutting once, lengthwise and once crosswise. Arrange banana pieces opposite each other in a sherbert dish with cut sides of the banana facing inside. Place ice cream in dish between banana pieces. Cover ice cream with syrup and crushed fruit or preserves. Garnish with whipped cream, nuts, cherries or berries. Makes 1 Banana Sundae.

"When good friends get together, serve food with a foreign flavor." The Exotic Fruit Dessert may be an answer to this statement.

Arrange in the center of a large crystal plate a pile of melon balls. Place Bing Cherries (stems on) in groups of 6 around the balls with small bunches of green seedless grapes in between. Place sliced peeled fresh peaches in about 6 slices. Cut bananas in two crosswise, then each half lengthwise and place on the spokes as the spokes of a wheel. Garnish the center of the melon balls with a few fresh strawberries and mint leaves. Serve with Raspberry Sauce (recipe below) and creamy cheese (recipe below.)

FRESH RASPBERRY SAUCE
Wash carefully 1 pt. fresh red raspberries. Cover with 1/2 to 1 cup sugar and let stand 2 hours. (Or thaw frozen raspberries) Put through a food mill. Serve over fresh fruit. Makes 2 cups sauce.

CREAMY CREAM CHEESE
Add 1/2 cup cream or milk to two 3 oz. pkgs. cream cheese. Whip well until light and the consistency of heavy cream. Serve over fresh fruit.

To make cup cakes interesting, cut cone-shaped pieces out of tops of cup cakes. Turn upside down and frost with a chocolate icing to form peaked hats. Fill cavities with scoops of vanilla ice cream. Make eyes and noses with raisins. Set frosted hats on top of clown heads.

FUDGE PIE
1/2 cup butter or margarine
3 sqs. (3 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
2 cups sugar
4 eggs, well-beaten
1/4 tps. salt
1 tps. vanilla
2-3 cup chopped English walnuts

Melt butter and chocolate in saucepan on Warm. Stir in sugar. Blend beaten eggs into chocolate mixture. Add salt, vanilla and nutmeats. Pour into well-greased 9-inch pie plate. Bake in 350 F. oven 45 minutes. Wrap and freeze.

To thaw remove from freezer one or two hours before serving time. If desired, pie may be topped with vanilla ice cream or whipped cream. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

CREAM PUFFS
Bring to boil 1/2 cup water add 1/4 cup margarine. Heat until margarine melts.

Add all at once 1/2 cup flour. Stir vigorously until ball forms in center of pan. Remove from heat and let stand five minutes.

Add one at a time, beating after adding each, 2 eggs. Mixture should be very stiff. Shape on cookie sheet brushed with margarine, by dropping from spoon or using pastry bag and tube. Bake until free from beads of moisture (40 to 45 minutes) in moderately hot oven (375°.)

Fill with Royal Vanilla or Chocolate Pudding, made according to directions on package. Pour chocolate glaze over; Melt together 2 tablespoons margarine and 2 squares unsweetened chocolate. Stir until smooth. Cool slightly.

Vacation Advice

"Outdoor activities and changes from workday routine can be beneficial to both mind and body. It is important, however, to consider accident prevention and health protection plans," stated Dr. Mack I. Shanholtz, State Health Commissioner, today.

"For raw nerves, restoring energy and generally building up physical fitness, nothing is better than outdoor living — provided always that proper and adequate precautions are taken against the potential health hazards incident to such living. Check your camp site for a safe water supply, a sanitary sewage disposal system and the absence of poison oak and poison ivy. Try to find out beforehand if the area is infested with ticks or other dangerous insects. Make arrangements for preparing your food in a safe manner or eat in health department approved restaurants. "Swimming has always been a favorite summer sport," Dr. Shanholtz continued. "It can be healthful, stimulating and enjoyable. Swimmers should wait an hour or two after meals before entering the water and should remain near the shore or another swimmer. It is sheer folly to dive into water of an unknown depth or to continue swimming after you have been (Continued on page five)

Some of the most thrilling human drama that's enacted comes through radio stations you've probably never heard or even heard of.

They're the 92 radio stations of this company and its AGE affiliates and the 999 transmitter-receiver units in company cars and trucks.

Chief job of our 2-way-radio-equipped service cars is to protect your electric service. In routine maintenance and in answering trouble calls they save lots of time and money for us and for you. And not infrequently they've gone beyond the call of duty and helped save something more... property, for instance, or even life.

Reserve grazing for late Fall and Winter: In August or early September make an application of 100 to 200 pounds per acre of ammonium nitrate to orchard grass and lespedeza; fescue-lespedeza, or either grass grown alone. The purpose of this is to stimulate growth for additional late fall and winter grazing and thereby reduce requirements for winter feed. This appears to be a desirable practice, but should be used on a trial basis until more experimental information is available.

Tests Continuing on Use of Rock Phosphate in State — How does rock phosphate compare with other fertilizers?

Farmers and fertilizer men have long made conflicting claims about the worth or worthlessness of rock phosphate for Virginia soils. The question is receiving added emphasis these days, since the 1952 General Assembly legalized the sale of rock phosphate in Virginia.

Tests conducted at the VPI Agricultural Experiment Station so far have indicated that, in relation to superphosphate, alfalfa responded best to rock phosphate fertilizer. Corn was next, followed by red clover and timothy hay, and wheat. Pasture was very low in comparison to the other crops.

Other experiments showed that rock phosphate was very effective when used with manure on crops in rotation. In a rotation of corn, wheat, and 2 years of hay, yields increased over a 16-year period until they equalled the yield of crops fertilized with superphosphate and manure.

Rock phosphate is a finely ground rock material which may be applied to the soil without further processing or treatment. Its use has been limited principally because it dissolves very slowly in the soil, and unless it is applied in large quantities, it does not supply crops with enough phosphorus for maximum growth. It usually is cheaper per unit of total phosphorus than superphosphate and is well adapted to application by labor-saving methods. In addition, rock phosphate is believed to have a lasting effect when applied to the soil, a feature helpful in permanent systems of farming.

Tests are being continued at VPI, at the branch station at Orange, and on the private farm of Billy Martin in Campbell County.

The test plots will be cropped in rotation to corn, wheat, and clover. It is believed that at least three complete cycles, nine years, is the shortest period possible to assess the value of rock phosphate.

Meanwhile, the Virginia Station gives these preliminary answers to the question "How can rock phosphate be used best?"

Superphosphate is superior to rock phosphate in practically all cases.

Rock phosphate is not suitable where a lot of phosphorus is needed immediately.

You can expect satisfactory results from rock phosphate only if you use it in large amounts (1,000 to 2,000 pounds per acre), and if you use it to build up permanently the phosphorus content of the soil for long-time usage.

Rock phosphate gives better results when you mix it thoroughly with the soil rather than when you apply it in bands.

Rock phosphate gives better results in acid soils than on well-limed soils.

Rock phosphate gives better results in a rotated cropping system which includes legumes. Certain legumes like alfalfa and clovers are able to use rock phosphate more effectively than do other crops.

Where you use rock phosphate on soils low in phosphate, supplement it with superphosphate until the soil has received adequate phosphorus.

Management of Strawberry Runners is Advised — Proper spacing of new strawberry runners is an important factor in production of high grade fruit.

The easiest and most economical way to handle the new runner plants, which are now beginning to appear, is to let them root as they will until late August. Cultivation at the side of the rows will keep the runners from spreading out of the rows and into the middles. Plants that become too thick may be dug out.

To get even distribution of plants in a row it is often desirable to train the new runners by moving them with a hoe to the space where the plants are needed. Where needed, a small clod or stone just back of the tip will keep it in place until rooted.

The best way to distribute the runners from a plant is to train them in all directions so the mother plant is completely surrounded by new growth. Where a plant is missing, early runners from nearby plants may be trained into the empty space to fill the row. If the row is filled by late August with runner plants six to nine inches apart, it is safe to destroy any late runners.

Check Berry Growth—It's time for raspberry and blackberry growers to check the terminal growth of the new shoots in their plantings.

The tips of the new shoots should be pinched off when they reach the desired height to prevent the plants from growing long, sprawling canes. Pinching the tips throws the growth into sturdy side branches, making sturdy compact bushes. Head the black raspberry at about 15 to 24 inches, and the purple raspberry and blackberry about six inches higher.

Identification of Disease Import- ant in Tobacco — If disease shows up in your tobacco field, be sure it is identified correctly so you will know what variety to plant next year.

If you see tobacco plants wilting and dying in the field, don't wait until the plant is completely dead and dried out because, at this stage, it is impossible to positively identify the disease. The disease blackshank usually starts in the roots and then moves upward. On young plants the entire stem may be blackened. The pith frequently dries out into disc-like plates. These plates are usually a reliable indication of blackshank. However, it is entirely possible to have blackshank without these characteristic symptoms.

Granville wilt is another disease often brought to farms on contam-

As Senator Russell has been injected into the Senatorial campaign in Virginia by Messrs. Miller and Whitehead, he has issued a statement so as to make it clear that he and Senator Byrd voted alike on the basic farm legislation for soil conservation and the establishment of the farm program, which includes tobacco, cotton and peanuts.

The statement by Senator Richard B. Russell, issued from his office in Washington, follows:

"It has come to my attention that my name has been injected into the Democratic Senatorial contest in Virginia in connection with Senator Byrd's record on farm legislation. In view of my vital interest in the Soil Conservation Program and all phases of farm legislation, I shall attempt to set the record straight insofar as I am able.

"I have served in the United States Senate during the entire period of Senator Byrd's tenure in that body. The Senate does not have a more conscientious or harder working member. Senator Byrd has demonstrated his knowledge of, and interest in, the problems of the farmers of this country. This is particularly true with respect to Soil Conservation Program, the original and basic Soil Conservation Act being passed with Senator Byrd's support on February 15, 1936.

"Senate Bill 2787 which was passed by the Senate on December 17, 1937, has, I understand, been a subject of much discussion. Both Senator Byrd and I opposed this bill due to the very drastic penalties against farmers incorporated therein. That bill, - S. 2787, provided criminal penalties against farmers violating rules or regulations issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, which position was then occupied by Secretary Henry Wallace. The bill contained many objectionable features, chiefly related to the vast power vested in the Secretary of Agriculture over farming activities, and although it was passed in the Senate over my opposition as well as Senator Byrd's the House of Representatives never adopted it and it never became a law.

"Another bill dealing with the same subject matter, but without the drastic and punitive provisions of S. 2787, was passed by the Senate on February 14, 1938. This was H. R. 8505 and this law today is the basic agricultural legislation establishing acreage controls and support prices for tobacco and other basic commodities, as well as amending the Soil Conservation Act of 1936.

"This bill received the support of both Senator Byrd and me. It provided the base on which our farm program has been built and has greatly benefited the farmers of this Nation. This is the bill under which the agricultural programs in Virginia and every other state have operated since 1938, including tobacco, cotton and peanuts. It passed with Senator Byrd's support and is the basic law under which the farmers of Virginia and every other state have operated the acreage control and price support programs for their crops, as well as received soil conservation payments."

Why Vote

Why vote? The often used answer is "Why bother. My one vote doesn't amount to anything anyway." The fact is that your "one vote" carries the weight of five. You are voting for yourself and four other people in Virginia. This statement, no doubt, needs a little explanation.

Statewide elections in Virginia draw out less than twenty percent of the potential voters (men and women over twenty-one years of age) and presidential elections only slightly more than that number. Thus it is easy to see that with only one-fifth of the eligible citizens of the State taking the trouble, or feeling the responsibility of voting, it makes every vote just five times as important. Are you willing to be numbered among the four people, who will let a fifth person decide, who you will have in office, and what type of laws and government you will live under? The system of having all the decisions made for the people seems to be working very well in Russia (for those in power.) we are sure none of us want that sort of think here, but we are making little effort to see, that a small minority does not make the decisions for the majority.

Only between 30 and 35 percent of all Virginians over twenty-one have taken their voting privileges and responsibilities seriously enough to qualify themselves for voting. Of this small percentage less than half turn out at the polls on election day. These figures are nothing short of amazing and should serve to stir us from our complacency and change our practice of letting the few make the decisions for the many. So far we have been lucky but trusting luck too far always ends in disaster.

On Tuesday, July 15, a Democratic Primary, for the selection of a candidate for the United States Senate, will be held in Virginia. The way we can best support the man of our choice and the principles for which he stands, is to turn out and give him the biggest vote possible, whether we think he needs it or not.

Voting is your privilege. Make it your duty and you will be certain to retain the privilege.

Country Lawyer

By Walter Johnson

With Senators Byrd and Robertson voting for it the Senate has just passed a bill which would require "Fair Trade Practices" among retailers. The purpose is to eliminate "cut throat competition" and which, in the language of the retailers, covers activity of the more enterprising merchant who may offer his goods at a lower price.

There was tremendous pressure brought upon Congress to pass this bill. Merchants banded together and spent a lot of money to get this bill enacted to deprive them of their basic right to determine for themselves at what prices they would offer their own property for sale. What fools men can be.

The theory of eliminating price competition is directly opposed to the theory we have operated under for so long and as so strongly initiated by President Theodore Roosevelt. Under that we busted up combinations which we called trusts and which had as their purpose the setting of prices. We preferred to let prices be controlled by the natural forces of competition and we busted up those combinations of men which set prices.

On the surface it may appear to the retail merchants that they have won a victory but instead they have lost much. Under this law all merchants are required to sell at prescribed prices and each merchant can sit back in assurance that his competitors are not under-selling him. He thinks that he is protected against "cut throat competition" but he isn't.

In pulling this blanket of federal regulation over him the retailer is giving up his basic right to sell his wares at prices he may determine for himself. In giving up that right he is paying a terrible price for what on the surface appears to be restraint on his competitor. This blanket of federal regulation cannot stand for long at this stage. It must and will be expanded. Where prices are held at prescribed levels it is certain to follow that these prescribed prices are in line and the public will rise up and demand it. Where the merchant is prohibited by law from selling below prescribed prices it must follow that government shall set those prescribed prices. By the very nature of things it must follow that where the merchant is prohibited from selling below prescribed prices those prescribed prices must be determined by government.

For that reason the retail merchant is committing economic suicide when he cries to government for protection against his competitor. It cannot be that one merchant shall be denied freedom to sell his property at prices which he determines without all merchants being deprived of that freedom.

Retail merchants must, eventually, regret asking government to step into partial management of their affairs. What they have done must also affect all the people because we all must buy at retail.

It is probably important to the retailer that his competitor be restrained from "cut throat competition" but it is of greater importance that the freedom of all men to buy and sell be retained.

In assuming power to direct how and at what prices men may deal Congress has hurt all the people. In crying to Congress that it should so act the organized retailers have hurt themselves as well as the rest of the people.

It is said that President Truman may veto this monstrosity. If he does he will do what is right and proper for a refreshing change.

The Meanderer

The fact that the rain came seems to be about the most important thing that has happened. Everything looks so green and lush, and pastures are coming back fast. We hope it came in time to grow another hay crop, and it probably did. Gardens now are too wet, to get into, even to pick any vegetables, but they look so much better than the droopy sight they presented this time last week, that we won't complain.

The summer time is when myriads of bugs and insects and beetles are found everywhere. We wish we knew about them, for even though they do seem to get in places that we wish they didn't they are a most interesting tribe. Each one is a marvelous bit of construction — the different colors, the way they fly and walk, the texture of wings and bodies, the numbers of legs, and even the expression of their "faces".

Insects have been called man's worst enemy, and so they are, but some have economic value, and for other reasons we would be hard put to exist without them. In the broad view, insects play an important natural role, not only in ways that benefit man, but as food for many kinds of fish, amphibians, birds and mammals. Many of our songbirds depend almost entirely on an insect diet. Every fisherman knows how fresh-water game fish go after insects. Insects help make our rich plant life and wildlife possible. So when people talk about widespread insect control, which could happen with newer chemicals, the broad view should be kept in mind. Some local control may be successful and useful to man, but on a large scale might cause more harm than good.

The other morning we were going by a recently cut alfalfa field and we noticed hundreds of things flying low over the field, and spread over a wide area. We stopped to see what was going on, and caught one of the flying things in our hands. It was almost an inch long, and a beautiful green color. After consulting the books, we figured out that what we had seen was a crowd of June Bugs. Apparently the right name is Figeater, but this beetle feeds on many plants, eating roots, stems and leaves. The book corroborated our observation that the adult June Bugs fly in large numbers, making a loud buzzing sound which is somewhat similar to the buzzing of bumblebees.

Anyone interested in a simple, cheap little guide on insects should purchase, for a dollar, the Golden Nature Guide on Insects, put out by Simon & Schuster, and showing 225 species in full color. This is only a starter, for with over 600,000 species of insects that have been identified, and with this number being possibly only 10 percent of the insects yet to be discovered, one can see that the world of insects is almost limitless.

Voting is your first duty, July 15.

William Henry Harrison, died at the end of his first month as president, serving the shortest term on record.

The first oil pipe line was of wood construction, five miles long, and had a capacity of 800 barrels daily.

What with minor battles over the technicalities of seating delegates, nominating candidates, splits with parties, between parties, and members of the same political party calling each other complimentary names, the common garden variety voter is not so much inspired to participate, as to escape from it all until the day he is faced with a ballot. But on the other hand, it is necessary to read and listen, so that when voting time comes, anyone eligible to vote can do so with a feeling of conviction that he is actually taking part in his own local and national government. There never has been a time when it has been more important for each individual to think more of the good of the whole, meaning either the world or his community, than the gain of the individual or a particular small group.

After considering the ins and outs of politics, it is a pleasant change of pace to consider the problems and pleasures of small boys. We witnessed a while back a little boy's first taste of ingratitude. Taught that it is a good thing to protect weak or small animals from harm, the youngest in our family sought to rescue a mouse from under the paw of the family cat. As he reached to pull it from the threatening claws, the mouse turned and bit his finger. He was more angry than hurt. The world is full of disillusionment.

There is a sense of satisfying repetition, like an intimation of immortality, about the way a child will find wonder and delight in the same things generation after generation. But any child by the seaside or a running stream, and he will come running eventually with a wondrous discovery - a smooth, round stone, polished, sometimes beautifully striped, nice to feel with thumb and finger. Then he will discover that they come in different shapes—fine things to collect in a candy box and treasure for many weeks afterward. What child that has walked in a country field has never picked a yellow buttercup, held it to the light and wondered at the luscious, translucent color of the little cupped petals? And when did one ever resist the temptation to lie down and roll in a thick green stand of tall grass?

And speaking of small boys someone in the Saturday Evening Post remarked that the clearest demonstration of how fast this country is losing its topsoil occurs in giving said subject a bath. E.F.W.

inated plants. It usually is found in the lower areas of fields, and usually starts in the roots on one plant. The leaves on this side wilt first and a few days later the disease may progress until all leaves of the plant have wilted. If the stalk of a wilted plant is cut across, streaks of yellowish discoloration may be seen. These streaks later darken and, in advanced stages, the blackened areas may show on the surface of the stalk. A dirty-white ooze often can be pressed out of a cut stalk or roots, and, when found, is positive test in diagnosing Granville wilt.

Do not confuse these two diseases with soreshin, or "rotten stalk". This is an old-established disease, usually of only slight importance. Damaged plants show a black discoloration of the stalk just above the ground, and then topple over. Usually only a few plants affected with soreshin are scattered singly throughout the field.

Reed explained that he had been informed that that card would serve him as a substitute for a driving permit for a period of 60 days after his release from the Navy. Judge Watson gave him the benefit of the doubt in this portion of the case but handed him the heavy fine and the suspended sentence on the other half.

Norman Hazlett was fined $5 plus costs for being drunk in the town of Scottsville. He did not take an appearance at the court but pled guilty in advance and sent in the necessary money with Police Chief F. F. Marsh.

Woodrow Wilson Hyes, Negro, was acquitted of a driving without license charge when he produced a valid permit in court which covered the date that the charge was made. Hyes explained that he had failed to transfer his permit when he changed wallets.

Three Injured

Three persons well known in Scottsville were on the brink of disaster last week. Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Ash and their son Bobby, all of Charleston, W. Va., escaped with only bruises and lacerations when their car went out of control and was nearly demolished.

The Ashes were returning from North Carolina enroute to Scottsville. Near Petersburg they lost control of the car which left the road, jumped a ditch, climbed a sand bank, then rolled over twice before landing upright.

The three occupants were taken to a hospital in Petersburg for treatment and then released. Earle McEwen of Richmond, Mrs. Ash's uncle, took the three to his home and then brought them here to Scottsville.

Mrs. Ash is the former Cornelia Ann Jones, daughter of R. D. Jones and a granddaughter of Mrs. W. F. Paulett of Scottsville.

for PRICE

From coast to coast folks are calling the '52 Ford Victoria America's "best-dressed" car! Its new curved one-piece windshield is a "first" in its field. Ford's choice of new body, upholstery and color combinations is the widest in low-priced car history!

The young of heart choose Ford's Crestline Sunliner. With its new 110 high-compression V-8 horsepower, you get the most power ever offered in the low-price field. And take your pick of Fordomatic, Overdrive or Conventional.

YOU CAN PAY MORE BUT YOU CAN'T BUY BETTER

Another favorite son is the all-new Ford Ranch Wagon—the lowest-priced full-size station wagon. Like all '52 Fords, it has Automatic Ride Control... far easier steering. "Test Drive" a new Ford. You'll agree no car gives you so much style, power and comfort for the money.

Fordomatic, Overdrive and white sidewall tires optional at extra cost. Equipment, accessories and trim subject to change without notice.
